TYNDINAGA RESERVE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Extensive repairs are being made to the dwelling house on John A. Lott's farm, towards the west end of the reserve.

The venerable missionary exchanged duties with Rev. Mr. Dobb, of Odessa, on Sunday last.

The oldest house on the reserve is that of Mrs. Seth W. Hill, which stands on an eminence opposite the village of Northport.

Mr. Anderson's weekly services at Peter Brant's house in Deseronto are increasing in popularity, and attract a large number of the Mohawks.

The annual missionary meetings were held in the churches on the reserve on Sunday last. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Messrs. Patton and Dobb, setting before the congregations in eloquent terms the necessity of increased contributions to the mission fund, which is the backbone of the diocese. The roads were bad, and in consequence the attendance was not large. However, the offerings were good, comparing favorably with those of other years.

TAMWORTH.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The roads in this section have been almost impassable for the past week owing to the severe snow storms.

Totul annual tax given by the ladies of St. Andrew's church here, on Tuesday night last, was in every way a grand success.

Mr. W. A. York has returned to the west again after spending the winter with his parents.

Philip McKim is improving nicely from his attack of influenza fever.

Mrs. Sherman's daughter, Miss Blanchie, has returned home from Kingston, where they have been spending a few weeks visiting friends.

C. G. Corral has been laid up with la grippe for a few days, but we see he is able to be around again.

Mr. Ross, father of Messrs D. E. Rose and A. T. Rose, merchants of this place, has moved from Selby here, where he intends to reside.

The Independent Order of Oddfellows will march from the hall to the Methodist church, where Rev. Wm. Jolliffe will deliver an address to them.

Quite a number went from this section to the residence of L. F. Hodge on Thursday night, where they joined with neighbors and friends in presenting Mr. and Mrs. Lodge with a valuable present on their departure from our midst.

Mr. Fred Harkness was laid off from the store for a few days on account of not feeling well, but was around again on Monday.

Mr. Wm. J. Haggerty is able to be around again.

The Sunday school convention, held in this place last week, was largely attended.

Mr. Frank McLaughlin laid a fine horse last Sunday.

A tramp was found three miles west of here last week in an old camp, badly frozen and nearly dead.

Mr. Jas. Hercher and wife returned home from Harrowmarket last week.

Visiting brethren welcome.

W. A. ROCKWELL, P. O. Box 25, Napanee.

BLESSINGTON.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The heavy snow storm of last week left the roads in a terrible condition.

Miss Ethel Gossell, of Foxboro, spent last week as guest of Miss Blanche Robinson.

Mr. Cole is visiting relatives in Prince Edward county.

Another wedding is reported.

Mr. James Still is having his farming implements, etc., to his farm near Shannonville.

On Wednesday evening a party of young people gathered at the residence of Mrs. Robt. Thompson, where a very enjoyable time was spent.

The directors of Bronte cheese factory have contracted the next season's cheese at one eighth of a cent above the board price, which evidently reflects great credit on their cheese-maker, Mr. Anson Latta, who has been in their employ for several years.

Miss Lottie Hicks, of the 7th con. of Tyndinaga, was married on the 23rd ult. to Mr. Hetta, of Frankford.

Mr. C. A. Palmer, county organizer for the Patrons of Industry, spent the past few weeks in the vicinity of Madoc.

LONSDALE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mrs. Howell, of Toledo, Ohio, is visiting her niece, Mr. A. H. Bruce.

Mr. James McGuinness, an old resident, is at present very ill. It is hoped that in a short time he may be out among us again.

Mr. Bert Kent are visiting friends at Strela.

Rev. Mr. Adams, of Shannonville, will preach a missionary sermon in the Methodist church on Sunday morning, March 5th.

On Saturday last our street was so crowded that for a while it looked as if the services of our police would be required to keep the peace. A large number of men, boys and dogs had gathered on Front street. It was soon, however, that the first application of MINARD'S LINIMENT so relieved me that I fell into a deep sleep and complete recovery shortly followed.

JOHN S. McLEOD.

Miss Crepper, of Shannonville, is visiting at Mr. Saml. Spencer's.

Mr. Jacob Rathban has been drawing out timber with a view to making improvements to his property.

The storm of last week was a severe one. March came in like a lamb.

Mrs. Jacob Foster is not gaining strength.

Mr. Samuel Spencer is erecting a new ice house and filling it. He expects to reap the benefit next summer.

Mr. Martin Foster is going to overhaul his outbuildings and make extensive repairs.

Mrs. Isaac DeMill, of Northport, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. R. A. Brooks. The venerable lady is 92 years old, but very active and vigorous.

Mr. William Potts is putting a new engine and engine room in his ferry boat, and will have it ready by the opening of navigation to accommodate the public.

Mr. Manly Fay is busy drawing out timber for Delbert Jones and has gone into a combined saw mill, evaporator and cracker at Northport, all to be done by steam power.

ROSLIN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Messrs. Shepherd & Brintnell have sent down their saw and have gone into the anchor ice which is floating down the river.

Hall's steam mill is running lively just now.

Mr. Day Howard, of Pictouville, is just alive; the doctors hold out no hope.

Dr. Hudson had a very close call for his life the other day. His horse got frightened and jumped over a fence and he was thrown into the water. He was rescued by a neighbor and is now recovering.

Mr. G. W. Halstead, of Roslin, has rented his hotel to S. S. Smith and has gone into the undertaking business for a change. He has a fine hearse.

HALSTON.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Institute next Wednesday evening.

The weather during the past week has been bright and clear. The sun is growing more powerful each day. There has been no thaw worthy of the name. There are no prospects yet of a very early spring.

A Kingston newspaper states that the Rathbun Company are endeavoring to secure the site of the new barracks on the city for a railway station. If they want it very much they will, no doubt, get it.

Mr. & Mrs. E. W. Rathbun went to Oswego last Saturday and returned home on Tuesday. On their return they brought with them Miss Rathbun, who we regret to say, has been quite ill from a severe attack of pleurisy. A private car was engaged at Oswego and the party came through without change by way of the Suspension Bridge.

On Thursday night of last week, at a place called Craigville, near from Colney wood, a woman named Jennie Welch is alleged to have murdered her own mother and daughter and then attempted to burn their bodies so as to destroy all traces of her crime. She has been arrested by the police and a coroner's inquest is still in progress.

It is alleged that Mrs. William Ryan, a young married woman, whose husband conducts the Hub hotel in Napanee, has eloped with Arthur Christie, a Grand Trunk operator at Sidney crossing.

Mrs. Ryan, whose maiden name was Lizzie Thompson, was visiting her parents at Belleville, and drove out to Sidney. When last heard from the couple they were at Napanee.

Port of Deseronto.

The following are the customs figures at Deseronto for February, 1893: Exports,
$13,045; imports, $204; duties collected,
$1,343.36.

Casualties.

While working at the dock last Saturday
Mr. Ephraim Martin had his upper lip cut and a tooth knocked out by a plank which sprung up during some operations.
Dr. Vandervoort attended to his injuries.

Temperance Crusaders.

The Crusaders commenced their meetings last night in Union Hall. This popular organization has been holding meetings each night for a week. All are welcome. Good singing and forcible addresses. Do not fail to hear them.

Canoe Club.

The Deseronto Canoe and Boating Club are preparing for a grand smoking concert to be held at a date in the near future. A song-of-war will be the principal feature.
Teams from different establishments of the Rathbun Company will pull for a magnificent trophy to be presented by the Club.

A Good Fall.

Mr. Wm. Martin has received word from Ottawa, Iowa, that his son Sidney, formerly of Deseronto, recently fell from a building where he was employed, a distance of twenty-one feet and that three ribs were broken by the fall. His injuries, however, are not considered to be of a serious
character.

Fire Near Marlborough.

The log house of John Fitzgerald, of Hungerford township, near Marlborough, was consumed by fire on Monday morning.
The fire, caused by a box stove, started about 3 a.m. Nearly all the contents of the building were saved, but Mr. Fitzgerald's hands were so severely burned that he has been unable to use them since.

Deseronto Post Office.

According to the Postmaster-General's Report the gross postal revenue of Deseronto for the year ending June 30th, 1892, was $4,638.65. There were issued 1,632 money orders for $14,230.64 on which the postmaster received from the public was $119.42. Total amount of postage paid
$7,070.20; compensation to postmaster on money order business $38.21 and for mailing a school bus $13.49. Salary of postmaster $1,140; allowance towards rent and fuel $160.

Too Slow.

There is much grumbling both here and in Prince Edward over the slow method of conveying mails from Deseronto to Solmeville, Northport, Greenpoint, etc., due to the round about route at present adopted. The department would consult the interests of business men by making some new arrangement. It would not take much ingenuity to make a route by which a letter could reach these places in an hour or two after it left the Deseronto post-office. The business men along the Bay should take steps to bring the matter before the postmaster-general.

Board of Health.

The Board of Health recently sent out Messrs. E. J. Pratt and J. H. Pratt as commissioners to report on the sanitary condition of the town. They have sent in an exhaustive report. They found 715 families and a total population of 3,860 souls. There were only 93 sick people. Within the town limits there are 130 houses, 78 cows and 14 swine. The swine are all on farms adjoining town. The sanitary condition is a very fifty and unsatisfactory condition, and the board will no doubt take proceedings in many ways to bring the parties to justice.

Wedding Bell.

A quiet wedding took place last night when Mr. Wm. Mansfield Hurst, of the Bay of Quinte railway offices, Deseronto, and Miss Maud Menz, daughter of Mr. Herman Menz, North Fredericksburg, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride, Mr. J. H. Pratt, Esq., of Napanee.
The bride was attended by Miss M. Menz, sister of the groom, Mr. M. Menz, of Pictou, was best man. The bride was the recipient of many valuable presents. After the ceremony the happy couple left for Picton where they spent several days visiting friends. They returned to Deseronto on Monday and have been cordially welcomed by a large circle of friends with whom THE TRIBUNE wishes in extending very hearty congratulations.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN PORTE.

Capt. Jonathan A. Porte died at his residence, Trenton, last Wednesday morning, 1st inst. The intelligence of his death was heard here, as elsewhere along the Bay of Quinte, with great regret. Capt. Porte was born in the County of Oxford, Ireland, on the 25th of February, 1841. His father was a native of King's county, and occupied the position of head constable; and his mother, whose maiden name was Sparrow, was descended from an old military family. Capt.
Porte came to Canada in 1853 and settled at Pictou. He was educated at the county high school at Pictou and at the grammar school, Belleville, and left school in 1859.
He subsequently spent a few years in the United States as a clerk in a mercantile firm.
In 1861 he ran a small steamer, the John Greenway, and continued to do so for six years, when he was burned. He then built the Norfolk, but after running one season he sold her. A few years later he built the steamer Utica, which he sailed upon the lake and bay for a number of years. In 1879 he built, along with another gentleman, the Mary Ethel, and in the winter of 1880 he built the Varuna, which vessel he controlled until his death. About 1882 the Mary Ethel was sold to the Trenton and Bay of Quinte Navigation Company, of which Capt. Porte was a large shareholder.
He was for some time president of the Bay of Quinte Navigation Company. He was a member of the first council after the incorporation of Trenton as a town. For many years he was a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. In religion he was a Methodist, and in politics a Conservative.
He was married in 1863 to Miss Garrett, whose family were residents of Prince Edward county. He is survived by his widow and only child, a daughter. Deceased was a brother of Mrs. W. P. Bowen, Napanee road. Few men were better known in the Bay district than the late Captain Porte.
He was a great favorite with the travelling public, who will greatly miss him in his absence. He was a genial, kind, and friendly man, and will have the sympathy of all in their great affliction. The deceased had been complaining all the past summer of pain in his stomach, and before Christmas he became so much worse that he was confined to his room. His illness resulted from an attack of liver complaint. During the last few days he was unable to get out of his bed, and he died peacefully on Monday last. The remains will be conveyed by the Central Ontario train to Pictou, where they will be interred in Glenwood cemetery.

Municipal Election.

A meeting of the electors of the town of Deseronto was held in the town hall on Monday, 27th inst., for the purpose of nominating a suitable person to fill the position of mayor, rendered vacant by the resignation of Wm. R. Aylsworth, Esq. Mr. R. N. Irvine, town clerk, was returning officer, and ever seen in Deseronto on such an occasion.
The following persons were duly nominated:
John Newton, M.D., nominated by H. B.
Rathbun, seconded by C. Jacques; John
Dalton, by A. E. Gracey and L. Hopkins;
F. J. Wims, by R. Geddis and G. J. Carter;
Richard H. Baker, by A. S. Vallan and J. L. Ferguson; A. S. Vallan, by J. J. Dryden and W. J. Malley. Messrs. Wims and Vallan promptly declined the proffered honors. A public meeting was organized, and the proceedings then became as lively as the most ardent lover of excitement could have desired. Dr. Newton and Mr. Dalton delivered addresses, and Mr. R. H. Baker being absent, his mover, Mr. A. S. Vallan, spoke in his behalf. The various speakers spoke their minds without fear or affection. There were many laughable incidents during the proceedings. All good life made were loudly applauded, and the electors, and excitement at times ran quite high. Messrs. Dalton and Baker sent in their resignations to the returning officer within the specified time, and on Wednesday official, in the presence of a solitary elector, declared Dr. Newton duly elected Mayor of Deseronto.

EAST HASTINGS REFORMERS.

A meeting of the Reform Association of East Hastings was held at Canifon on Thursday, Feb. 23rd. Mr. J. M. Hurley, president of the association, presided. Nottelsting had read a letter from a very large assembly of farmers and other residents of the riding. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: J. M. Hurley, president; Wm. McLaren, Melrose, and Wm. Stoddart, Deseronto, vice-presidents; J. M. Hurley, secretary; and J. M. Hurley, treasurer. The selection of a candidate was proceeded with by ballot, W. R. Aylesworth and Mr. Lattin being scrutinized. The ballot was taken and it was found to be unanimously in favor of Mr. M. Vernielya, Esq., Rev. Deane of Thurlow, and the announcement was received with hearty and prolonged applause.

The business of the association concluded, a public meeting was held, Mr. Hurley, president of the association, filling the chair. The Chairman thanked the association for again honoring him with the position of president and promised to do his duty to the best of his ability.

The following resolution, moved by Mr. Wm. Stoddart, seconded by L. Hoggins, both of Deseronto, was carried by a standing vote: "That the Reform Association of East Hastings hereby expresses its admiration and grateful appreciation of Sir Oliver Mowat and his ministers for the honest and beneficial government given by him to the Dominion of Canada, and that this association pledges itself by every legitimate means to return them a supporter from the riding at the next election."

Mr. Hurley said there was no uncertainty about their confidence in Ontario's financial affairs.

The following resolution was then moved by Jacob S. Thurlow, seconded by Jones Philip, Thurlow:

"That the Reform Association of East Hastings hereby expresses its unbounded confidence in the Hon. J. H. Brown, Minister of Finance, and his followers in the Dominion parliament and its unremitting opposition to the present fiscal policy of the government, and that the Reform Association proposes to perpetuate a slight, trimmed until the next session of parliament greatly to the injury of the farmer."

Mr. Vernielya, who was received with prolonged applause, proceeded to address the meeting. He stated that he would indeed be very ungrateful not to appreciate the unanimous expression of their confidence and esteem. He accepted the line of action proposed by the Reform Association to redeem the riding. Four years previous he had been defeated by a small majority. He felt at that time that he would have been glad to have had the fight over again. They should profit by their experience at that time and he was sure the riding would send a supporter of the government, in whose hands the province of Ontario had been entrusted for so many years. He regarded our confidence as one of the chief causes of his defeat at the general election. He desired to impress on the minds of the Reformers the necessity of going to the polls to record their votes. He thanked the electors of Thurlow for the support they had given him in many years of his municipal affairs. He had, while a member of the county council, pursued what he believed was an honest course and he felt that the great majority of the electors of the township acknowledged that fact and approved of his management. His experience in municipal matters would aid him in the management of the riding. He promised them that he would not neglect an opportunity of doing it, if he became a member of the legislature, but he would not expect to be brilliant, neither did he expect to be brilliant in the legislature, but he would depend upon his honesty and his faithfulness, and to the best of his ability if elected. (Applause.)

Mr. J. M. Hurley was the next speaker. He congratulated the association on their choice of a candidate; he was sure if Mr. Vernielya was successful, as he believed he would be, they would regret their choice. He was a practical farmer and well acquainted with the wants of the people, and would be of inestimable value to them if successful in his election. A little over a year he had been elected a candidate for the Commons. He could say that he believed they did not feel the interests of the riding in their interests or the interests of the riding in their interests, so far as the agricultural interest were concerned, were opposed to the budget speech. He considered that the budget speech of the finance minister would throw the business of the country into confusion owing to the uncertainty of the future. Mr. Aylesworth proceeded to discuss the same question at some length, showing where Ontario had derived from the sale of the land, conducted by the provincial government, over $2,000,000 more than they would have received had the sale been conducted by the Dominion government.

Mr. R. C. Clapp, Q.C., was the next speaker. He delivered an eloquent address which was heard with the deepest interest. He began by saying that the association had made a mistake in Mr. Vernielya's election. He had a candidate they might well be proud of, and he was sure that the position to the satisfaction of his constituents and with credit to himself. He believed in every agricultural riding electing a farmer to the legislature. He regarded farming as the most honorable and most difficult profession to make a success of today in Canada. Farming should be a business, and every farmer of any age should have a knowledge of agricultural chemistry. He was glad to see that the provincial government was recognizing the need, and was giving the most careful consideration in this line. Mr. Clapp also dwelt at some length upon the timber question, explaining that he considered the system of robbery carried on by the Ottawa government in the sale of the timber was a disgrace. In speaking of Mr. Aylesworth's election he said his defeat was a great misfortune to the riding for they had discarded a worthy representative of the riding. He proceeded to dissect Mr. Northrup's speech in the budget, and said that when in Belleville recently, he had been besieged by deputations asking him to use his influence in having the duty taken off wheat. The speaker then urged Mr. Northrup or any one else to name one deputations that waited upon Mr.

Northrup for that purpose when in Belleville. Failing to do so, he urged for East Hastings must stand convicted of making a false statement. It is time the people of the riding should be made aware of the fact that the faces are paid by the producing public and they are shut out from the advantages to be derived from their own produce. The different effects of the tariff were explained by Mr. Clapp, and the innumerable places they had built from the money they had robbed the people of. He did not want the people of the riding to be getting sick of the Q.P. It rested altogether with the farmers whether they got the change they were asking for. The agricultural vote today was sufficient to vote out any government who would not cancel a tariff which the mass of the people were opposed to; action, united action, should be taken in this matter at once, by dropping the curse of any country, party politics, and make every representative pledge himself on the tariff question.

The actual loss sustained by the farmers of Hastings each year by being deprived of their own produce, was estimated at $100,000. Mr. Clapp advocated direct taxation then each person would just what they had to pay, and how much they contributed towards keeping the government at Ottawa. Mr. Clapp was warmly cheered upon resuming his seat.

Mr. Clapp then read a letter delivered by A. S. Alesau, Wm. Stoddart, L. Hoggins, B. C. McCargar, Mr. McCannion and others, and after a vote of thanks to the speakers, the meeting was brought to a close by cheers for the Queen, the Candidate and the Mowat Government.

THE COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

To the Editor of THE TRIBUNE,

DEAR SIR—The subject of the Columbian Exposition has been so well ventilated by the public press that writing to THE TRIBUNE on the subject seems superfluous. It is, however, a subject of supererogation, but with most of us to be reminded of anything personally connected with the world's great exhibition, and ignored this fact, and various localities in one state have been visited and explained with the worst of effect. The exhibition, Special care has been taken to guard against such a thing, which makes such a place a terror to the public. This, as well as the well-arranged and moderate rates, are considerations which weigh heavily usually in determining the limited circumstances from visiting such a place. But the main reason to make the exposition available to all classes so that the man of small means, as well as those of large, can extract the enjoyment and benefit from the wealth of knowledge as will be afforded them. I look upon the exposition not merely as an accumulation of beautiful works of art, but as a grand school of industry, of the various branches of the natural world centered in that small compass by representatives from all the world, and the most perfect of the world. This would be enough to commend it to the intelligence of our people as well as to the man of small means. We must consider the social and moral effect in awakening the fraternal relations with the various races of the globe, in extending the ties of brotherhood to the whole human family, in the reach of civilization. We will gain a nearer acquaintance with the various modes of thought and habits of life by personal contact and by a display of their industries, the exposition will prove a grand school of industry, of the various branches of the natural world centered in that small compass by representatives from all the world, and the most perfect of the world. SALLY DOWNS

An After-War Romance

OF THE SOUTH
BY BRET HARTE

COPYRIGHT, 1932, BY THE AUTHOR.

PROLOGUE

WHAT had been in the cool gray of that summer morning a dewy country lane, marked only by a few wagon-tracks that never crossed upon its grassy border, and indented only by the faint footprints of a crossing fox or coon, was now, before high noon, already crushed, beaten down and trampled out of all semblance of its former solitude. The heavy, springy jolt of the gun carriage and caisson had deeply cut through the middle track, the hoofs of crowding cavalry had struck down and shredded the wayside vines and bushes to bury them under a cloud of falling dust, and the dull, plunging double-quick of infantry had trodden out this hideous ruin into one dusty level chaos. Along that rudely-widened highway, useless muskets, torn accoutrements, knapsacks, caps and articles of clothing were scattered, with here and there the larger wrecks of broken-down wagons, roughly thrown aside into the ditch to make way for the living column. For two hours the greater part of an army corps had passed and repassed that way, but, coming or going, always with faces turned eagerly toward an open slope on the right which ran parallel to the lane. And yet nothing was to be seen there. For two hours a gray and blueish cloud, rent and shaken with explosion after explosion, but with a low, thrumming and thickening after each discharge, was all that had met their eyes. Nevertheless, into this ominous cloud solid moving masses of gray or blue had that morning melted away, and emerged from it only as scattered fragments that crept, crawled, ran or clung together in groups, to be followed and overtaken in the rolling vapor.

For the last half hour, also, the desolated track had stood empty and deserted. While there was no cessation of the rattling, crackling and explosions on the fateful slope beyond, it had still been silent. Once or twice it had been crossed by thin, hovering wings, and frightened and hesitating little feet, or later by skulkers and stragglers from the main column who had boldly entered it from the hedges and bushes where they had been creeping and hiding. Suddenly a prolonged yell from the hidden slope beyond—the nearest sound that had yet been heard from that ominous distance—sent them to cover again. It was followed by the furious galloping of horses in the lane, and a handsome red-capped officer, accompanied by an orderly, dashed down the track, wheeled, leaped the hedge, rode out on the slope and halted. In another instant another man came whirling down the lane after him. Out of it strained the heavy shoulders and tightened chain traces of six frigate horses dragging the swaying gun that in this tempest of motion alone seemed passive and helpless, with a awful foreknowledge of its power. As in obedience to a signal from the officer it crashed through the hedge after him, a sudden jolt threw an artillery man from the limber before the wheel. A again a rising and falling melody of flapping hats, tossing horses' heads and shining steel appeared for an instant, advancing tumultuously up the slope. But the apparition was as instantly cloven by flame from the two nearest guns, and went down in a gush of smoke and roar of sound. So level was the delivery and so close the impact that a space seemed suddenly cleared between the whirling of the charging cavalry was distinctly seen, and the shouts and oaths of the intricately struggling mass became plain and articulate. Then a gunner serving the nearest piece suddenly dropped his swab and seized a carbine. For out of the whirling confusion before them a single figure was seen galloping furiously toward the gun.

The red-capped young officer rode forward and knocked upward the gunner's weapon with his sword. For in that rapid glance he had seen that the rider's reins were hanging loosely on the neck of his horse, who was still dashing forward with the acquired impetus of the charge, and that the youthful figure of the man, wearing the stripes of a lieutenant, although still erect, exercised no control over the animal. The face was boyish, blonde and ghastly; the eyes were set and glassy. It was death itself changing the living man.

Within a few feet of it the horse swerved before a brandished rammer, and striking the cheeks of a gun carriage pitched the stripes of a lieutenant. The hot blood of the dead man smoked on the hotter brass with the reek of the shambles, and bespattered the hand of the gunner who still lifted the dead body down the hill. As they came to cease firing, for the yells from below had ceased too; the rattling and grinding was receding with the smoke further to the left, the ominous central cloud parted for a brief moment, and showed the unexpected sun glittering down the slope upon a near and peaceful river.

The handsome artillery officer had dismounted and was gently examining the dead man. His breast had been crushed by a fragment of shell. He must have died instantly. The same missile had cut the chain of a locket which slipped from his opened coat. The locket it up with a strange feeling—perhaps because he was conscious himself of wearing a similar one; perhaps because it might give him some clue to the man's identity. It contained only the photograph of a pretty girl, a tangle of fair hair and the word "Sally." In the breast pocket was a sealed letter with the inscription: "For Miss Sally Downs, to be delivered if I fall by the firing-line." A faint smile came over the officer's face. He was about to hand the articles to a sergeant, but changed his mind and put them in his pocket.

Mounting the lane and words beyond, and even the slope itself, were crowded with reserves and waiting troops. His own battery was still unlimbered awaiting orders. There was a slight commotion in the lane.

"Very well done, captain. Smartly taken and gallantly held."

It was the voice of a general officer passing with his staff. There was a note of command in his tone and the middle-aged, care-drawn face of its owner was relaxed in a paternal smile. The young captain flushed with pleasure.

"And you seem to have done close work, too," added the general, pointing to the dead man.

The young officer hurriedly explained. The general nodded, saluted and passed on. But a youthful aid airily lingered.

"The old man's feeling good, Courtland," he said. "We've rolled 'em up all along the line. It's all over now. In point of fact, I reckon you've fired the last gun in this particular fratricidal engagement."

The last gun, Courtland remained silent, looking absently at a fragment of shell that he had crushed and broken at his feet.

"And I shouldn't wonder if you got your reward," said the young aid. "But who's your sunny southern friend here?" he added, following his companion's eyes.

Courtland repeated his story. A little more cheerfully, which, however, failed to impress the young aid. "Well, I'm so he concluded to stop over," he interrupted, cheerfully. "But," looking at the letter and photograph, "I say—suppose you might get Doe Murphy's letter and hunt her up when this cruel war is over. Say you're fulfilling a sacred trust, don't you? Good idea, old man! Then," he trotted quickly after his superior.

Courtland remained with the letter and photograph in his hand, gazing absently after him. The smoke had rolled quite away from the fields on the left, but still hung heavily down the south on the heels of the flying cavalry. A long bugle call swelled up musically from below. The freed sun caught the white flags of two field hospitals in the woods and glared tranquilly on the broad, cypress-fringed, lag-flowing and cruel but beautiful Southern river, which had all unseen crept so smilingly that morning through the very heart of the battle.

CHAPTER I

IT IS two o'clock express from Rollins to Forrester, Ga., had been proceeding with the languid placidity of the river, whose banks it skirted for more than two hours. But at a certain point it had stopped quite frequently, sometimes at straggled stations and villages, sometimes at the apparition of stray hatted and linen-coated natives in the solitude of pine woods, where, after a decent interval of cheery conversation with the conductor and engineer, it either took the stranger on board or relieved him of his parcel, letter, basket, or even the vocal message which he was charged. Much of the way lay through pine barrens and swampy woods which had never been cleared or cultivated; and through decayed settlements and ruined villages that had remained unchanged since the war. A few old-fashioned houses, some of which had been built three years before there were vestiges of the severity of a former military occupation, the blackened timbers of railway bridges, still unaltered since the day of a certain memorable march, sections of iron rails taken from the torn up track, roared in bonfires and bent white red-hot around the trunks of trees, were still to be seen. These mementoes of devastation, the energy to remove them; the dull apathy which had succeeded the days of hysterical passion and convulsion still lingered; and the slow improvement that could be detected was marked by the languor of convalescence. The helplessness of a race, hitherto dependent upon certain barbaric customs or political places and power, unstable in invention and suddenly confronted with the necessity of personal labor, was visible everywhere. Eyes that but three short years before had turned vindictively to the north and gazed along the line of a certain help and direction. They scanned eagerly the faces of their energetic and prosperous neighbors—and quondam foes—upon the verandahs of southern hotels and the decks of southern steamboats, and were even now watching from a group in the woods the windows of the halted train, where the head and shoulders appeared of two men of manifestly different types, but still alien to the country in dress, features and accent.

Two negroes were slowly loading the engine tender from a wood pile. The rich brown smoke of turpentine knots filling the train with its stinging fragrance. The elder of the two northern passengers, with sharp eastern angles in his face, impatiently glanced at his watch.

"Of all created shiftlessness this beats everything," he couldn't wait a minute in enough wood to last the ten miles further to the terminus where he last stopped? And why, in thunder! with all this firing up, can't we go faster?"

The younger passenger, whose calm, well-bred face seemed to indicate more repose of character, smiled quietly.

"If you really wish to know—as we've only ten miles further to go—I'll show you why. Come with me."

He led the way through the car to the platform and leaped down. Then he pointed significantly to the rails below them. His companion started. The metal was scaling off in thin strips from the rails, and in some places its thickness had been reduced a quarter of an inch, while in others the projecting edges were torn off or hanging in iron shreds, so that the wheels actually ran on the narrow central strip! It seemed marvelous that the train could keep the track.

"Now you know why we don't go more than five miles an hour, and are thankful that we don't," said the young traveler, quietly.

"But this is disgraceful, criminal!" ejaculated the other, nervously.

"Not at all," returned the young man. "It's all in the way of going faster. And now you can understand why a good deal of the other progress in this state is obliged to go so slowly over the equally decaying and rotten foundation. You can see that the rails here are as good as the north."

The other passenger shrugged his shoulders as they recounted the platform. "I've seen Courtland, prima," he said. "I've seen Courtland, prima. I've never tried of talking of it to me, so I suppose I am."

Mr. Cyrus Drummond, was the vice president of a large northern land and surveying company. He had thought, extensively, of late, in Georgia, and the younger, Col. Courtland, was the consulting surveyor and engineer for the company. Drummond's opinions were a good deal affected by sectional prejudice and a self-satisfied and righteous ignorance of the actual conditions and limitations of the people with whom he was to deal, while the younger man, who had served through the war with distinction, retained a soldier's respect and esteem for his late antagonists, with a conscientious and thoughtful observation of their character. Although he had resigned from the army, the fact that he had previously graduated at West Point with high honors had given him preeminence in the technical appointment, and his knowledge of the country and its people made him a valuable counselor. And it was a fact that the country people had preferred this soldier, with whom they had once personally grappled, to the capitalist they had never seen during the struggle.

The train rolled slowly through the woods; so slowly that the fragrant pine smoke from the engine still hung round the wheels of the cars. Gradually the "colleges" became larger; they saw the distant white wooden colonnades of some planter's house, looming still opulent and pretentious, although the frame of its inclosure had broken gaps, and the gate waggled on its single hinge.

Dr. Drummond sniffed at this damning record of neglect and indifference. "Even if it had been done," he might still spend a few cents for nails and slats to enable them to look decent before folks, and not parade their poverty before their neighbors," he said.

"But that's just where you misunderstand them," said Courtland, smiling. "They have no reason to keep up an attitude towards their neighbors, who still know them as 'Squibs' and so. 'Colonel' this and that, and the 'judge'—owners of their vast but crippled estates. They are not ashamed of being poor, which is an accident."

"But they are working, which is deplorable," interrupted Drummond. "They are ashamed to mend their fences themselves, now that they have no slaves to do it for them."

"I don't doubt very much if some of them know how to drive a nail, for the matter of that," said Courtland, still good-humoredly; "but that's the fault of a system older than themselves, which the founders of the republic retained. We cannot give them experience in their own country on one hand, and in fact, Drummond, I am very much afraid that for our purposes—and I honestly believe for their good—we must help them for the present as they are."

"Perhaps," said Drummond, sarcastically, "you would like to reinstate slavery?"

"No. But I should like to reinstate the master. And not for his sake alone, but for freedom's sake and ours. To be plain, since I have taken up this matter for the company. I have noticed that the negro—even more than his master—can't handle his new condition. He is accustomed to his old traditional task master, and I doubt if he will work for any other—particularly for those who don't understand him. He mistakes me: I don't propose to go back to the whip, to that brutal institution, the irresponsible overseer, to the buying and selling the separation of the family, nor any of the old wrongs, but I propose to make the old master our overseer and responsible to us. He is not a fool and has already learned to deal with a more profitable way to pay wages to his old slaves and have the power of dismissal, like any other employer, than be obliged, under the old system of enforced labor and life servitude, to undergo the cost of maintaining incompetence and idleness. The old sentiment of slave ownership has disappeared before natural common sense and selfishness. I am satisfied that an honest and sane use of this utilizing of the old master and the new freedom we will be better able to cultivate our lands than by buying up their estates, and setting them adrift with a conscience generally better.

"You don't mean to say that those infernal niggers would give preference to their old oppressors?"

"Dollar for dollar in wages—yes! And why shouldn't they? Their old masters understand them better and treat them more generally better. They know our interest in them is only an abstract sentiment, not a real liking. We show it at every turn. But we are not so stupid as to suppose that we can I have no doubt, corroborate my impressions. He insists upon our staying at his house, although the poor old fellow, I imagine, can ill afford to entertain company. But he will be offended if we refuse."

"He is a friend of yours, then?" asked Drummond.

"Fought against his division at Stony Creek," said Courtland, grimly. "He never tries of talking of it to me, so I suppose I am."

A few moments later the train glided beside the Redland platform. As the two travelers descended a hand was laid on Courtland's shoulder, and a stout figure in the blackest and shiniest of alpaca jackets and the whitest and broadest of Panama hats welcomed him. "Glad to see you, Courtland," he exclaimed. "I have been waiting along the line, boy," pointing to a grizzled negro servant of sixty who was bowing before him, "to take you things over instead of home flesh since the war—half a hat I didn't use for remounts I reckon you commissary gobbled up with the best live stock around here. He laughed heartily as if the recollections were purely humorous, and again clapped Courtland on the back.

"Let me introduce my friend, Mr. Drummond, Maj. Reed," said Courtland, smiling.

"You were in the war, sir?"

"No—I returned Drummond hesitating, he knew not why, and angry at his own embarrassment.

"Mr. Drummond, the vice president of the company," interposed Courtland, cheerfully, "was engaged in furnishing to us the services of war."

Maj. Reed bowed a little more formally. "Most of us, sir, were in the war some time or other, and if you gentlemen will honor me by joining in a social glass at the hotel across the way, I'll introduce you to Capt. Fredergast, who left a leg at Fort Oaks."

Drummond would have declined, but a significant pressure at his arm from Courtland changed his determination. He followed them to the hotel and into the presence of the one-legged warrior, (who turned out to be the landlord and barkeeper), to whom Courtland was introduced as Maj. Reed.

"The man, sir, who had pounded my division for three hours at Stony Creek!"

Maj. Reed's house was but a few minutes' walk down the dusty lane, and was presently heralded by the baying of three or four fox hounds, and foreshadowed by a dilapidated condition of picket fence and stuccoed gate front. Beyond it stretched the wooden doric columns of the usual southern mansion, dimly shadowed by the leaves of the horse chestnut trees that shaded it. There was the usual listless, black-shaded, former slaves and still attached householders, the usual social in-breathless attitudes at the approach of strange footsteps, and still holding the brash broom, duster or home implements they had been lazily using in their fixed hands. From the doorway of the kitchen, connected by a gallery to the wing of the mansion, "Aunt Martha," the cook, gazed also with a saucer clasp to her bosom and her revolving hand with the scrubbing cloth in it apparently stopped on a "dead center."

THE USUAL SOUTHERN MANSION.

Drummond, whose gorge had risen at these evidences of hopeless incapacity and utter shiftlessness, was not relieved by the presence of Mrs. Reed, who still carried in her small dark eyes and thin handsome lips something of the bitterness and antagonism of the typical southern rights woman—nor of her two daughters, Octavia and Augusta—who languid aristocratism seemed a part of the mourning they still wore. The optimistic gallantry and good fellowship of the major appeared the more remarkable by contrast with his cypress-shaded family, and their venomous possibilities. Perhaps there might have been a vein of southern insincerity in his good humor.

"You see, Mr. Courtland, with a pretty curl of the hereditary lip, "is about the only 'reconstructed' one of the entire family. We don't mean 'em much about here. I'd advise you friend, Mr. Drummond—if he's coming here toward him out of the blue smoke rose as vividly as on that memorable day. The pictures and letters he had taken from the dead man's breast, which had retained ever since; the romantic and fruitless quest he had made for the fair original in after days, and the strange and fateful interest in her which had grown up in his heart since then, he now knew had only been lulled to sleep in the busy preoccupation of the last six months, for it all came back to him with redoubled force. His present mission and its practical object, his honest zeal in its pursuit and the cautious skill and experience had brought to it, all seemed to be suddenly displaced by this romantic and ideal fantasy. Oddly enough, it appeared now to be the only reality in his life—the rest was an incoherent, purposeless dream.

"Is—Miss Sally married?" he asked, looking himself with an effort.

"Married? I reckon that to that farm of her aunt's! I reckon that's the only thing she cares for."

Courtland looked up, recovering his usual cheerful calm. "Well, I think that after luncheon I'll pay my respects to her husband! From what you have just told me the farm is certainly an experiment worth seeing. I suppose your father will have no objection to giving me a letter to Miss Downs."

"The plain truth is good enough for Hood's Sarsaparilla. No need of embellishment or sensationalism. Hood's Cures."

Sherrill Rock, of Buffalo, has seized 150,000 tons of coal belonging to the Reading Railroad Company on a writ of attachment issued out of the Supreme Court in favor of the Brown Hotel and Convoying Company.

business with him—if Maj. Reed, a southern gentleman, is going to keep shop he hasn't such a fool as to believe niggers will work when they ain't obliged to. That's been tried over at Mirandy Downs, not five miles from here, and the niggers are half the time runnin' round here tadin' hollidays. He put up new quarters for 'em and tried to make 'em eat together at a long table like those low-down folks up north, and did away with their cabins and their melon patches, and allowed 'em would get 'em out of lying round too much and wanted 'em to work over time and get no pay. And the result was that she and her niece and a lot of poor whites, Irish and Scotch, that she had to pick up along the river, do all the work. And her niece Sally was no more than half human woman during the war and up to all no'then tricks and dodges and swearin' in them, and yet for all that the thing won't work."

"Isn't her failure a great deal due to the lack of sympathy from her neighbors? Discontent is easily sown and the negro is still weighted down by superstition. If the Fifteenth Amendment did not quite knock off all his chains."

"Yes, but that is nothing to her. For if there ever was a person in this world who reckoned she was just born to manage everything and everybody it is Sally Downs."

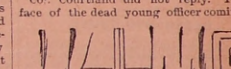

"Sally Downs?" repeated Courtland, with a slight start.

"Yes, Sally Downs, of Pineville."

"You say she was half union, but did she have any relations or—friends in the war—on your side? Any who were killed in battle?"

"They were all killed, I reckon," returned Miss Reed, darkly. "There was her cousin, Jules Jefferson, shot in the cemetery with her beau—who they say was Sally's, too; there was Chet Brooks and Joyce Masterson, who were both gone on her and both killed, too; and there was old Capt. Dows himself, who never lifted his head again after Richmond was taken and drank himself to death. It wasn't considered healthy to be Miss Sally's relation in those times, or to be connected with her."

Col. Courtland did not reply. The face of the dead young officer coming

"Is—Miss Sally married?" he asked, looking himself with an effort.

"Married? I reckon that to that farm of her aunt's! I reckon that's the only thing she cares for."

Courtland looked up, recovering his usual cheerful calm. "Well, I think that after luncheon I'll pay my respects to her husband! From what you have just told me the farm is certainly an experiment worth seeing. I suppose your father will have no objection to giving me a letter to Miss Downs."

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrup, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Cud, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.
"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osborn,
Lowell, Mass.
"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup, and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

OUR FLOATING ENGINEERS.

Twice a black November night. The skies overcast; the winds were whistling, tearing past the mast. "All hands aboard!" the captain cried. "Cast off the lines," he said. "To make it turn right," the signal "slow ahead!"

Was given below. A trembling of the craft was felt. In all her majesty and grace she moved. The steaming ship with ponderous engines was moving out. Of port, where she had calmly rested like a barge asleep. Upon its mother's breast. The good-eyes echoed back. Upon this trip worth-while was to be tested.

Soon past the outer harbor light she moved, and quickly. Heading on her course, "full speed" was signalled from the captain's bridge. The elements seemed mad that night. The sea was wild. And Neptune's strength of play intensified with foam the rolling breakers white; like demons did they lash and break against the bow, as if in mockery, to kiss their sought for prize.

From out the stacks rolled inky blackness fast and thick. As if to make the darkness still more dark, and down upon the angry sea, these bands of darkness—each white cap. As it broke with glass. The winds seemed angled by the view, and raged the fiercer. As the Good ship met each rolling sea.

Each man to duty now! With decks ablaze with light. Red, green and white, the racer sped upon her course. The throbs of engine each lurch, and in a choppy sea she sped. Shees the vessel labored heavily. Her ruddies Cans of hammered steel were golden now. Her Anchor arduous used, was double chained in place. As if to press that badge of hope more firmly to the heart. But on she sped, and rode each wave majestically. Suspense and double duty, hand in hand, were hers. And when at length glad dawn the morning lighted, upon her darkness and uncertainty—no sail in sight. No other craft had left her port that fearful night, while those who could sought shelter from the chilly blast.

Down through narrow stairway, deep below the decks. The engineer and his assistants bravely stood. Though worn and weary with fatigue, the throttles and the lever graced. Each cheek, though pale, was firm and calm. But with Resolution set, like the rigid features of the Sphinx. No lack of duty there—no moment of forgetfulness—for upon their action and sound judgment rested all.

The ponderous machine—sprightly and triply-coupled. To the shaft—obey this mandate. Stroke by stroke. And turn by turn, the shaft of steel revolved; while, leagued by leagued. Was counted off as hour by hour she sped. When the watch—followed swell, and plunging deep into the sea, or climbing up the mountain wave. The watch-tower throbbed and resounded by turn of wheel.

Who stood the watch—the double watch—till nerve and strength grew weak and faint. The floating engineers. But now the Storm is passed—outsped, outdone by glorious Mermaid from the bow the longest-for port is sighted, and with the relief to nerve and mind. Cornally a welcome guest. As nearer grows the shore, the roof of home, where friends or wife and Children sleep, looms forth. And when with Straining eyes they see the vessel inland bound, the Waving signal, "All is well at home," is answered with a Joyous heart. The port is reached in safety and on time.

The fears of those on shore are now allayed. Reports next day give accounts of safe arrival, and put full stress upon the captain's skill and bravery, but mention not the fact that Upon the men below the deck was greatest Achievement.

The heroes of the wave are noble stock. We place upon their brow a wreath of honor and glory. They ask not praise, but shall we no word of credit give?

Long may they live, Our Floating Engineers!—Dedicated to the National Convention, M. E. B. A., by B. W. Goodsell, of the Goodell Packing Co., Chicago, Ill.

"BRACE UP"

Is a tantalizing admonition to those who at this season feel all out, and with-out appetite and discouraged. But the wit in which Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up the tired frame and gives a good appetite, is really wonderful. So we say, "Take Hood's and it will brace you up."

MOUSE AND RATTLER FIGHT.

An Extraordinary Combat in Cincinnati, With An Extraordinary Result.

Until a week or so ago there was in one cage at the Cincinnati zoological garden a large rattlesnake and two three young ones. The snakes are fed twice a month, mice being the usual general prey. One of the young ones, a recently hatched Stephen put two mice into the cage for a starter, and one of them was promptly gobbled up by the mother, which proceeded leisurely to swallow it. One of the young rattlers started in with the intention of making a meal of the other, and Mr. Stephen, describing to an Enquirer reporter the scene which followed, said:

The way the mouse raced up and down was a caution. I could scarcely follow him with my eyes. The snake would move toward him one way and then another, but could never get into position to strike effectively. He made several lunges but they all fell short, and each time the mouse would jump out of his guard would land on him, and go through all sorts of fantastic maneuvers. The rattlesnake, during this performance indicated that he was being bitten, but the rodent was so quick I couldn't catch him at it. The fight must have lasted for fifteen or twenty minutes at least. At one time the mouse was cornered, and it was the battle to disengage that he wouldn't escape. Nevertheless, he did. The snake had grown desperate. His mouth was wide open and the mouse protruded. His rage was visible in the way he coiled himself and glared at his antagonist. He struck. Mr. Hostetter, the keeper, was coming, but the scene was some distance away and heard the reports the nose of the snake came into collision with the snake's head. The concussion stunned the reptile. I couldn't see how it happened, it was all done so quickly, but the next instant the mouse was so quick I couldn't catch him at it. He seemed to realize that his opponent was disabled. I saw him bite the snake, how many more times I am at a loss to say. Up to this time there hadn't been a particle of doubt in my mind but that the snake would ultimately prove the master. Now I suspect that I was on the verge of losing a valuable acquisition of the gardens. Still, having confidence in the prowess of the rattler, I allowed the battle to continue. The snake lay on its back, but was far from being out of the fight. He soon regained himself, but his every move was followed by an attack from the mouse. One or two times he gathered himself together and struck, but, failing to land each time, was set upon by the mouse with such rapidity that it was impossible to tell what execution was done. The fight slowly grew more and more one-sided. At length the snake failed to follow his little persecutor about. Then he lowered his head and finally subsided altogether. The mouse bounded at him and shook his head like a victor. He then scurried around the cage in apparent delight over the victory.

The snake continuing to lie still I left the place for a few minutes, expecting on my return in the morning to find no mouse and his knocked out antagonist fully recovered, but instead I found the mouse still in the cage. The rattlers head was completely eaten off, and the entire body was covered with bruises where the teeth of the rodent had entered.

How a Defender Regained Name and Worth.

That was a queer story Henry Waterson told in his lecture about a defalcation case at Louisville, says the St. Louis Republic. He said that several years ago a gentleman holding a commanding commercial and social position in the Kentucky metropolis had used the funds of the corporation of which he was the trusted financial head, and when the day of accounting came he found he was short by $50,000. The time was too brief to make the deficit good, and his own funds were in such shape that he was inextricably entangled. He was an honest man, but a momentary overconfidence had permitted himself to deviate from the narrow path just enough to use the firm's cash as a temporary loan. He sought to return it promptly. When the time came he could not. Instead of waiting the inevitable discovery he called a meeting of the directors, and in a straightforward confession, resigned his position and threw himself upon the mercy of the court, so as to speak.

He pledged himself to pay every dollar if he were not exposed and prosecuted. An animated discussion followed, and a large majority were in favor of giving the delinquent a chance. His hitherto high standing and undoubted business ability were in his favor, and so many of the directors had been so long acquainted with him that they would be compunctious if he were to be exposed. He was given a month to make good, and at the end of another year the other side of the ledger was cleared. He had been given a chance, and he had made it. He was now a prosperous and wealthy business man of Louisville. Two years after his misfortune one of the two men who had objected to his release was a fugitive in Texas charged with embezzlement, and at the end of another year the other side of the ledger was cleared. THE MEANEST SNEAK YET.

The Brookville Times says:—"The most contemptible sneak-thief yet heard from recently got into the Brookville bank on Sunday while Rev. Mr. Jackson was conducting services in the Methodist church, some persons entered the bank and cut the lining out of the reverend gentleman's overcoat, leaving the outside portion—which would have been repaired in the thief's possession—hanging in its place upon the wall. Robbing a church has been described as the meanest kind of a thief, but a man who would enter a sacred edifice, while a congregation were engaged in the worship of God, and destroy a man's coat for the purpose of robbing him, is a sneak, and he takes the premium for shameless depravity."

KNOWN IN HAMILTON.

HAMILTON.—Mrs. Ellen Brown, of Toronto, who was so marvellously cured of Bright's Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills, is well known in Hamilton, having been in the Hospital here where the authorities, in the case of the Toronto Institutions, pronounced her case incurable. People who know her here are surprised to learn that she is cured, as they thought she was in the Home for Incurables in Toronto, and never expected to see her again. She has gained Mr. Geo. Parke, the popular druggist of this city, says that the sales of Dodd's Kidney Pills are large and increasing, as all those to whom he has sold them are receiving a great benefit from their use. The success of Dodd's Kidney Pills over all other kidney remedies is owing to the fact that they never failed when used for Bright's Disease, Dropsy, Backache, Rheumatism, and all diseases of the Kidneys and blood.

THE SCIMITAR SNAKE.

There is a little reptile belonging to Madagascar known as the scimitar snake, that is the curling sword. Running along the back of its body is a sharp, thin, scimitar-shaped blade, which bends with the curvature of the snake's body as readily as would a well tempered steel spring; and throughout its entire length it is as sharp as a razor. They are not poisonous, but when one of them springs on a man which is like a very well do, he will soon have a leg off unless cracked in the pate. Some snake specialists claim that the presence of this reptile on the island is the reason that there are no large quadrupeds to be found there at present, the curling sword in back ages having taken off legs faster than they could be created.

IMPROVEMENT IN THE COUNTRY CEMETERY.

This was the title of a paper read by Mr. A. M. Sargent, of Alton, Ont., before the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents. After speaking of the various plans which have been suggested for establishing graveyards, and objecting strongly to family burial places, and also many other plans which he considered unsatisfactory, he advocated that the churchyard or village cemetery should be remodelled in its management. There should be a sufficient charge for each lot or grave to cover the permanent care of every lot sold, and an improvement made in the way to insure proper care for all time. He thinks that those who are most interested in the graveyards, for holders, should be the controllers of its management.

The site should be laid far enough away from the possible growth of a town or a village, so as not to be encroached upon in the course of time, and the size may vary from five to twenty acres, according to requirements. The site should give curved lines as a desirable site, but, next to this, a gently undulating piece of ground where quiet and rest may easily be made.

Roadways, in his opinion, should be twelve to eighteen feet wide, following the base of undulating surface as much as possible. The sides of the roadways should be added to the beauty. Lot sections should follow lines of the roadways, but begin far enough back to secure a border in order that trees may be planted without interfering with either the road or the lots. Irregular spaces may be left throughout all roads, for holders, should be the controllers of its management.

"THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Runs the old saying, and everything that ever makes part of any organ of the body must reach its place therein through the blood. Therefore, if the blood is purified and kept in good condition by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, it necessarily follows that the benefit of the medicine is imparted to every organ of the body. Curing, therefore, is simpler than the method by which the excellent medicine gives good health to all who will try it fairly and patiently!

AS BAD AS AN EARTHQUAKE.

Last Saturday night the people of Sandgate, County of Kent, England, were aroused by the rumbling of the ground and the rumblings underground. Walls split, ceilings fell and foundations sank and roofs fell. The rumbling of the ground was so loud that it was heard in the streets. The ground was so shaken that it was found large rents in the ground and were almost overcome by noxious vapors. Every body supposed the town was being shaken by an earthquake, and as the rumbling continued hundreds fled in a panic to the nearest towns. A few remained behind to remove their furniture from the falling houses.

The reports carried abroad by the fugitive caused the troops in an adjacent camp to listen to the aid of the people still in Sandgate. Soldiers and citizens worked for two hours in moving the most valuable property from the houses and in erecting tents in the fields about a mile outside the town for the women and children. At the end of that time the rumbling had ceased and the investigation was made in the town by the commander of the troops and several citizens.

They found that the ground on which Sandgate stands had sunk several feet, and that the subsidence had extended throughout the surrounding district, affecting in all about a square mile. The gas mains had been broken and the connection of water pipes had been disturbed, so that supplies of both gas and water had been stopped. Many cottages had been wrecked completely and the better built houses had been cracked and shivered to such an extent that they could not be occupied with safety. Nevertheless, many of the inhabitants returned to town toward morning.

Between five and six o'clock, however, they were frightened away by another subsidence of the ground and the recurrence of the rumbling. These phenomena have been repeated several times during the day and the town is practically deserted. As far as known no lives have been lost.

The disaster was caused by a landslide. The town is built upon a comparatively low cliff to the sea. The waves are believed to have undermined the cliff, which then settled and slipped toward the water, carrying with it the town. Two hundred houses were destroyed.

CHAPTER II.

OVERTHESS as Col. Courtland rode deliberately toward "Dove's Hollow," as the new experiment was locally called—although he did not abate his romantic enthusiasm in the least, he was not sorry that he was able to visit under a practical pretext. It was rather late now to seek out Miss Sally Dowd with the avowed intention of bringing her a letter from an admirer who had been dead three years, and whose memory she had probably buried. Neither was it tactful to recall a sentiment which might have been a weakness of which she was ashamed. Yet, clear-headed and logical as Courtland was in his ordinary affairs, he was nevertheless not entirely free from that peculiar superstition which surrounds every man's romance. He believed there was something more than a mere coincidence in his unexpectedly finding himself in such favorable conditions for making her acquaintance. For the rest—if there was any rest—he would simply trust to fate. And so, believing himself a cool, sagacious reasoner, but being actually, as far as Miss Dows was concerned, as blind, fatuous and unreasoning as any of her previous admirers, he rode complacently forward until he reached the lane that led to the Dows plantation.

Here a better kept roadway and fence, whose careful repair would have delighted Drummond, seemed to augur well for the new enterprise. Presently even the old-fashioned local form of the fence—a slanting zig-zag—gave way to the more direct line of post and rail, in the northern fashion. Beyond it, presently appeared a long, low frontage of modern buildings which to Courtland—surprise were entirely new in structure and design. There was no reminiscence of the usual southern porticoed gable or columns and veranda. Yet it was not northern either. The factory-like outlines of facade were suggestive of the Cherokee rose and jessamine. A long, roofed gallery connected the buildings and became a veranda to one. A broad, well-rolled gravel drive led from the open gate to the newest building which seemed to be an edifice of smaller path diverged from it to the corner house, which, despite its severe simplicity, had a more residential appearance. Unlike Reed's house there were no lounging servants or field hands to be seen; they were evidently attending to their respective duties. Dismounting, Courtland tied his horse to a post at the door and took the smaller path to the corner house.

The door was open to the fragrant afternoon breeze wafted through the rose and jessamine. So was a side-door opening from the hall into a large parlor or sitting-room that ran the whole width of the house. Courtland entered it. It was prettily furnished, but everything had the air of freshness and of being uncharacteristically new and empty, but a faint humming was audible on the rear wall of the house, through the two open French windows at the back, curtained with trailing vines which gazed upon a sunlit courtyard. Courtland walked to the window. Just before it, on the ground, stood a small light ladder which he gently put aside to gain a better view of the courtyard, as he stood at the open window.

In this attitude he suddenly felt his hat tipped from his head, followed almost instantaneously by a falling slipper, and the distinct impression of a very small foot on the crown of his head. An indescribable sensation passed over him. He hurriedly stepped back in the room, just as a small striped stocking foot was hastily drawn up above the top of the window with the feminine exclamation: "Good gracious me!"

Lingering for an instant, only to assure himself that the fair speaker had secured her foothold and was in no danger of falling, Courtland snatched up the hat, which had providentially fallen inside the room, and retreated ingloriously to the other end of the parlor. The voice came again from the window. It struck him as being singularly sweet and clear.

"Sally, is that you?" Courtland discreetly retired to his hall. To his great relief a voice from the outside answered: "What, Miss Sally?"

"What did you move the ladder for? You might have killed me!"

"Oh, God, Miss Sally, I didn't move no ladder!"

"Don't tell me, but go down and get my slipper. And bring up some more nails."

Courtland waited silently in the hall. In a few moments he heard a heavy footstep outside the rear window. This was his opportunity. Reentering the parlor somewhat ostentatiously, he confronted a tall negro girl who was passing through the room carrying a tiny slipper in her hand. "Excuse me," he said, politely, "but I could not find any of you to announce me. Is Miss Dows at home?"

The girl instantly whipped the slipper behind her. "Is yo' wantin' Miss Miranda Dows?" she asked, with great dignity. "Yes, Miss Sally Dowd—her niece!" Miss Miranda's bin gone to Atlanta for a week.

"I have a letter for Miss Miranda, but I shall be very glad if Miss Sally Dows will receive it," returned Courtland, handing the letter and his card to the girl.

She received it with still greater delicacy of dignity and marked deprecation. "It's clean gone out of my mind, sah, of Miss Sally is de resumption of visitah, at dis house. In fac, sah," she continued with intensified gravity and an exaggeration of thoughtfulness as the sounds of Miss Sally's hammering came shamelessly from the wall, "I don't know exactly of she's engaged playin' de harp, practisin' de languages or paintin' in oil and wash colors, o' givin' de lessons to de children at de court-house. It might be de honah for de one or de oder. But I'll communicate wid her, sah, in de budwah on de uppah floor." She backed dexterously, so as to keep the slipper behind her, but with no diminution of dignity, out of a side door. In another moment the hammering ceased, followed by the sound of rapid walking without; a few tiny twigs and leaves slowly rustled to the ground, and then there was complete silence. He ventured to walk to the faithful window again.

Presently he heard a faint rustle at the other end of the room and he turned. A sudden tremulousness swept along his pulses, and then they seemed to pause. He drew a deep breath that was almost a sigh, and remained motionless.

He had no preconceived fancy of falling in love with Miss Sally at first sight. He had dreamed such a thing possible. Even the girl's face that he had seen in the locket, although it had stirred him with a singular emotion, had not suggested that, and the idea he had evolved from it was never a potent presence. But the exquisitely pretty face and figure before him, although it might have been painted from his own fancy of her, was still something more and something unexpected. All that had gone before had never prepared him for the beautiful girl that now stood there. It was a poor explanation to say that Miss Sally was four or five years older than her picture, and that, later experiences, enlarged capacity, a different life and new ambition had impressed her youthful face with a refined nobility; it was a weird fancy to imagine that the blood of those who had died for her had been in some vague, mysterious way imparted an actual fascination to her, yet it was a fact that even a familiar spectator like Sophy, saw in her young mistress a more perfect woman than she had ever before seen. Her face, with its soft pink complexion, the silken hair—that looked as the floss of the Indian corn might look if curled, or golden spider threads, if materialized—and eyes that blouse—evidently a habilliment of Sophy's—behind her back as she returned. It was gathered under her arm, and she turned to look at him while her fair hair was tucked under the usual red bandana handkerchief of the negro housemaid. It is scarcely necessary to add that the effect was bewitching.

"But," said Miss Sally, eying her guest's smartly-fitting frock coat, "yo'll spoil yo' pretty clothes, sure! Take off yo' coat—don't mind me—and work in yo' shirt sleeves."

Courtland obediently flung aside his coat and followed his adroit hostess through the French window to the platform outside. Above them a wooden ledge or cornice, projecting several inches, ran the whole length of the building. It was a fact that Miss Sally was finding a foothold with laths between it and the windows of the second floor. Courtland found the ladder, mounted to the ledge, followed by the young girl, who smilingly waved his proffered hand to help her up, and the two gravely set to work. But in the intervals of hammering and tying up the vines, Miss Sally's tongue was not idle. Her talk was as fresh as when she was original as herself, and yet so practical and to the purpose of Courtland's visit, as to excite his delight in it and her own fascinating propriety. Whether she stopped to take a breath, or whether her pretty lips when she spoke to him, or whether holding on perilously with one hand to the trellis while she gestulated with the hammer, pointing out the divisions of the vine from her coign of vantage, she was as clear and convincing to his intellect as she was distracting to his senses.

She told him how the war had broken up their old home in Pinelville, sending her father to serve in the confederate councils of Richmond, leaving her aunt and herself to manage the property alone; how the estate had been deranged by the war, and how she had barely time to remove a few valuables; how although she had always been opposed to secession, and the war, she had not gone north, preferring to stay with her people and take with her the punishment of the folly she had foreseen. Now after the war and her father's death she and her aunt had decided to return to the old home, after their own fashion on this bit of property which had survived their fortunes because it had always been considered valueless and unprofitable for the region. It was here that they had undergone serious difficulty through the incompetence and ignorance of the freed laborer and the equal sympathy and assistance of her aunt. Courtland listened with a new, breathless and almost superstitious interest; they were his own theories—perfected and demonstrated!

am afraid Courtland thought little of its oddity or its idealistic transcendence, but it brought him his own tongue quite unemotionally and quietly. "I don't know what was in that note," Miss Dows, but I can tell you that that Maj. Reed ever put my present good fortune quite in that way."

Miss Sally laughed. Then with a charming exaggeration she waved her little hand toward the sofa. "There yo' naturally wanted a little room for that, co'nie, but now that yo've got it off—and mighty cozy it is, too—yo' can sit down." And with that she came down at one end of the sofa, prettily arranged a white billow of skirt so as to leave ample room for Courtland, and, looking her fingers over her knees, looked demurely expectant.

"But let me hope that I am not disturbing you unseasonably," said Courtland, catching sight of the faithful little slipper beneath her skirt and remembering the window. "I was so preoccupied in thinking of your aunt as the business manager of these estates that I quite forgot that she might have a lady's hours for receiving."

"We haven't got any company hours," said Miss Sally, "and we haven't just now any service for company manners, for we're short-handed in the fields and barns. When yo' came I was nailing up the laths for the vine outside because we couldn't spare carpenters from the factory. But," she added, with a faint access of mischief in her voice, "yo' came to talk about the farm?"

"Yes," said Courtland, rising, "but not to interrupt the work on it. Will you let me help you nail up the laths on the wall? I have in some experience the way in which we can talk as we work. Do oblige me."

The young girl looked at him brightly. "Well, now, there's nothing mean about that," she said, "and you can run out of the room and returned presently, tying the strings of a long, striped cotton cloth over her shoulders. "Yo' just wait here, then."

She jumped from the sofa, ran out of the room, and returned presently, tying the strings of a long, striped cotton cloth over her shoulders. "Yo' just wait here, then."

the estate. There were some English friends of her father's—old blockade runners—who had been in the States, provided them with more capital and imported some skilled laborers and skinned the country agent to represent them. But they were not the sort of people it was better for their reputation with their neighbors that they had not been beholden to the north. Seeing a cloud gather over Courtland's face, perhaps lads added with an affected sigh and the first touch of feminine coquetry came and invaded their wholesome camaraderie.

"Yo' ought to have found us out before, co'nie."

For an impulsive moment Courtland felt like telling her then and there the story of his romantic quest; but the reflection that they were standing on a narrow ledge with no room for the emotions that Miss Sally had just put a nail in her mouth and a start might be dangerous, checked him. To this may be added a new jealousy of her previous experiences which he had not felt before. Nevertheless he managed to say with some effusion:

"But I hope we are not too late now. I think my principals are quite ready and able to wait up for the English or French investor now or to come."

"Yo' might try yo' hand on that one," said Miss Sally, pointing to a young fellow who had just arrived from the office and was crossing the courtyard. "He's the English agent."

He was square shouldered and round-headed, fresh and clean looking in his white flannels, but with an air of being utterly distinct and alien to everything around him mentally and morally irreconcilable to it. As he passed the young girl, but changed again when he saw her companion. Courtland likewise was conscious of a certain uneasiness; it was one thing to be helping Miss Sally alone; but certainly another thing to be doing so under the eye of a stranger, and he was afraid that he met the young man with a look of surprise. Miss Sally alone retained her languid ease and self-possession. She called out:

"Wait a moment, Mr. Champney," she said, "I'll be right down. The ladder is leaning against it with one foot on its lowest rung awaited his approach."

"I reckoned yo' might be passing by," she said as he came forward. "Co'nie Courtland—this with an explanatory wave of the hand, and her companion, who remained erect and slightly stiffened on the cornice—"is no relation to those figures along the frieze of the Redlands' courthouse but a nothin' of an Englishman, and he's come down here to look after our capital."

Mr. Champney, she continued, turning and lifting her eyes to Courtland as she indicated Champney with her hand, "he isn't talkin' English, seein' English, thinkin' English, dressin' English and wonderin' why God didn't make everything English—is tryin' to do the same for his folks."

She turned to Courtland. "Co'nie Courtland—Mr. Champney." The two men bowed formally. "And now, co'nie, if yo'll come down Mr. Champney will show yo' round the farm. We'll go through yo' round find me here at work."

Courtland would have preferred, and half looked for her company and commentary on this round of inspection, but he concealed his disappointment in the knowledge that he was probably relieving and appeared to accept him as a bona fide stranger who could not possibly interfere with any confidential relations that might exist with Miss Sally. Nevertheless he met the Englishman's offer to accompany him with polite gratitude, and they left the house together.

In less than an hour they returned. It had not been taken that time for Courtland to discover that the real improvements and the new methods had originated with Miss Sally; that she was virtually the controlling influence there, and that she was probably rather than assisted by the old-fashioned and traditional conservatism of the company of which Champney was steward. It was equally plain, however, that she was not without the consciousness of this and was frankly commingling about it.

"You see, over there they work things in a different way, and by Jove they can't understand that, there is any one of them. They're always wigging me as if I could help it, although I've tried to explain the bigger business, and all that, don't you know? They want Miss Sally to refer her plans to me, and expect me to report to them, and then they'll submit them to the board and wait for its decision. Fancy Miss Dows doing that? But, by Jove, they can't conceive of her at all over there—don't you know?"

"Which Miss Dows do you mean exactly?" asked Courtland dryly.

"Miss Sally, of course," said the young fellow, briskly. "She manages everything here. She includes Sophy in one of those niggers work when no one else can—a word or smile from her is enough. She can make terms with dealers and contractors, and she can make them look at my figures. By Jove, she gets points out of those traveling agents and inventors, don't you know, who come along the wire with their little lamps. She got one of those lightning rod and wire fence men to show her how to put up an arbor for her trailing roses. Why, when I first saw you up here, I thought I'd got a new one. I don't know? That she's asked—that is, at first, of course, you know what I mean—has, by Jove, we were interested in her. I thought I'd offered to help Miss Dows," said Courtland, with a quickness that he at once regretted.

"You expect to return to England?" asked Courtland, with a slight smile.

"Oh, no! But I shall go out of the company's service and try my own hand. There's a good bit of land about the miles from here, and in the market, and I think I could make something out of it. A fellow ought to settle down and be his own master," he answered, tentatively.

"But how will Miss Dows be able to spare you?" asked Courtland, uneasily conscious that he was assuming an indiscreet position.

"Oh, I'm not much use to her, don't you know—at least not here. But I might if I had my own land and if we were neighbors. I told you she was the place, no matter who's here, or whose money is invested."

"I presume you are speaking now of young Miss Dows?" said Courtland, dryly.

"Miss Sally—of course—always," said Champney, simply. "She runs the shop."

"Where there are some French investors—relations of Miss Dows? Does anybody represent them?" asked Courtland, pointedly.

Yet he was not quite prepared for the naive change in his companion's face. "No. There was a sort of French cousin who used to be a good deal to the fore, don't you know—but I rather fancy he didn't come here to look after the property," returned Champney with a quick laugh. "I think the aunt must have written to his friends, for they called him off, and I don't think Miss Sally broke her heart about him. She's that sort of girl—she could have her pick of the state if she went in for that sort of thing, eh?"

Although this was exactly what Courtland had intended to say, he pleased him to answer in a distrust sort of fashion: "Certainly I should think so, and to relate into an apparently business abstraction."

"I think I won't go in," continued Champney as they neared the house again. "I suppose you'll have something more to say to Miss Dows. If you're a good deal of a Frenchman, come to the office. But she'll know. And—er—if you're—er—staying long in this part of the country ride over and look me up—don't you know, I have a smoke, and a jigger. I have a boy who knows how to mix them and I've some old brandy sent me from the other side. Good-by."

More awkward in his kindness than in his simple business confidences, but apparently sincere in both, the Englishman shook Courtland's hand and walked away. Courtland turned towards the house. He had seen the farm and its improvements; he had found some of the ideas practical and others not so clearly there was nothing left for him to do but to thank his hostess and take his leave. But he felt far more uneasy than when he had arrived; and there was a singular sense of incompleteness in the visit that he could not entirely account for. His conversation with Champney had complicated—he knew not why—his previous theories of Miss Dows, and this new acquaintance with the Englishman, that brought him there, he tried to think that it had. If Miss Sally was really—a—distracting element to Courtland's consciousness, it was a matter of business of which she would take a managerial part. It was true that Champney had said that she was "not that sort of girl," but this was the testimony of one who was clearly under her influence. He entered the house through the open French window. The parlor was deserted. He walked through the front hall and porch no one was there. He had a few minutes, a slight chagrin beginning to mingle with his uneasiness—she might have been on the lookout for him—she or Sophy must have seen him returning. He would ring for Sophy and give her his thanks and regrets for her mistress. He looked for a bell, touched it, but, on being confronted with Sophy, changed his mind and asked to see Miss Dows. In the interval he looked at her picture and the appearance of Miss Sally he resolved to do the very thing which he had dismissed from his thought but an hour before as ill-timed and doubtful. He had the photograph in his pocket; he would make them his excuse for personally taking leave of her!

She entered with her fair eyebrows lifted in a pretty surprise. "You're a good deal to goodness, I thought yo'd ridden over to the red barn and gone home from there. I got through my work on the vines earlier than I thought—one of Judge Carret's nephews dropped in in time to help me with the last row. Yo' needn't have troubled yo'self to send up for me for mere company manners, but Sophy says yo' looked sort of anxious and I suppose yo' want to see me for something."

Mentally objugating Sophy, and with an unpleasant impression in his mind of the unkindness of her words, he was helping Miss Sally in his place, he nevertheless tried to collect himself gallantly.

"I don't know what my expression conveyed to Sophy," he said, with a smile, "but I trust that I have told you may be interesting enough to make you forget my second intrusion." He paused, and still smiling, continued: "For more than three years, Miss Dows, I have been thinking of you, and although we have actually met to-day only for the first time, I have during that time carried your image before me. I thought I ought to meet you, which was only the result of an accident, I had been seeking for three years. I find you here under your own peaceful vine and fig tree, and yet there you are, you've come to me out of the thunder cloud of battle."

"My good gracious!" said Miss Sally. She had been clasping her knee with her fingers, and now leaned back with an expression of intense amusement on her bright eyes. Courtland saw the mistake of his tone, but it was too late to change it now. He handed her the check. When she had glanced over the letter, which appeared to be brief, she said, with smiling, half-pleasing tranquility: "It was that poor Chet Brooks. Sure! I heard that he was killed at Snake River. It was just like him to rush in and get killed at the first pop! And all for nothing, too, pure foolishness!"

Shocked, yet relieved, but uneasy under both sensations, Courtland went on blithely: "He was not the only one, Miss Dows. There was another man picked up who also had your picture." "Yes—Joyce Masterlon. They sent it to me. But yo' didn't kill him, too?"

"They were brave men, Miss Dows."

"I don't know that I personally killed either," he said, a little coldly. He paused and continued with a gravity which he could not help feeling very inconsistent and even indignant. "They were brave men, Miss Dows."

"To have worn my picture?" said Miss Sally, blithely.

"To have thought they had so much to live for, yo' know, to have willingly laid down their lives for what they believed was right."

"Yo' didn't go huntin' me for three years to tell me a so'n'n girl—that so'n'n men know how to fight, did yo' co'nie?" returned the young lady with the slightest lifting of her head and drooping of her blue-veined lids in a divine hauteur. "They were always kind enough for that, even among themselves. It was much easier for those poor boys to fight a thing out than think it out, or work it out. The folks in the north learned to do all three; that's where you got the grip on us. Yo' look surprised, co'nie."

"I didn't expect you would look at it—quite in—in—that way," said Courtland, awkwardly.

"I'm sorry I disappointed yo' after yo'd taken such a heap o' trouble," returned the young lady, with a pouting assumption of humility as she rose and smoothed out her skirts, "but I didn't know exactly what yo' might be expecting after three years; if I had, I might have put on mourning." She stopped and adjusted a straying tress of her hair with a sharp corner of her dead man's letter. "But I thank yo' all the same, co'nie. It was real good in yo' to think of totin' these things over here." And she held out her hand frankly.

Courtland took it with the sickening consciousness that for the last five minutes he had been an unconscious ass. He could not prolong the interview. After she had so significantly risen, he had only taken his leave and kept the letter and looked for a later visit—perhaps when they were older friends! It was too late now. He bent over her hand for a moment, again thanked her for her courtesy and withdrew. A moment later he heard the receding beat of his horse's hoofs on the road.

She opened the drawer of a brass-handled cabinet and after a moment's critical survey of her picture in the dead man's locket, tossed it and the letter in the recesses of the drawer. Then she stopped, removed her little slipper from her foot, looked at it thoughtfully and called: "Sophy!"

"Miss Sally?" said the girl reappearing at the door.

"Are you sure you did not move that letter?"

"I declare to goodness, Miss Sally, I never touched it."

Miss Sally directed a critical glance at her hand-maiden's red-collared neck, "but I trust that I have told you may be interesting enough to make you forget my second intrusion."

He paused, and still smiling, continued: "For more than three years, Miss Dows, I have been thinking of you, and although we have actually met to-day only for the first time, I have during that time carried your image before me. LOCAL ITEMS.

This is St. Patrick's Day. Look out for equinoctial sales next week. Socials and other gaieties are quite numerous these times.

Mr. Samuel Eggleston, of Belleville, is dead, aged 97 years and 8 months. April 18th is the date fixed for the second reading of the Irish home rule bill.

Several new rollers for the Big Mill arrived this week. They will be placed in position forthwith.

Mr. Samuel Johnson, of the machine shops, lost the tip of a finger of his left hand in a drilling machine the other day.

Four new emery wheels have been placed in the Cement Works at Napanee Mills for the purpose of grinding cement.

The inhabitants of the east end of main street are anxiously inquiring how long it takes an able bodied man to learn the trombone.

Chief Sampson Green and Solomon Loft, and ex-chief Andrew Maracle have been at Ottawa this week on business matters.

The man who stole the oats from Mr. Sezemith as reported in our columns last week was sentenced at Napanee to twelve months in the Central prison.

If mild weather comes the ice on the bay will not last long. Already it is beginning to open at Light House Island, and also at the upper end of Captain John's Island.

Mr. J. D. Fletcher, Mill street, is one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county of Hastings, having been appointed when a resident of Rawdon township some years ago.

They are seriously discussing in England the project of building a cantilever bridge 200 feet high and carrying two railway tracks across the English channel. The estimated cost is $14,000,000.

The machinery which is being put into the Kingston penitentiary for the manufacture of binder twine will be of sufficient capacity to put out 500 a year. It will be put in operation about July 1st.

It is to be hoped that locomotive No. 3, which is quite inadequate to work yard as it is quite inadequate to move the enormous amount of cars now moving the southern section of the Bay of Quinte Railway.

The water in Sucker Creek is very high this year. The travelled road has been submerged on both sides of the bridge on the boundary road, and the railway bridge needs careful watching to prevent ice cakes lodging upon it.

It is said that Mr. John White, ex M.P. for East Hastings, may be a candidate to represent Vancouver district, British Columbia, in the house of Commons. Mr. Gordon, the member for this constituency, died a few weeks ago.

The weather continued quite mild until Tuesday night, and there was a heavy fall of rain on Saturday night, which cut down the snow at a lively rate. It looked as if spring had arrived in earnest. During the past two days there has been a cold, cutting wind from the west.

This is enumeration week at the post office and Mr. Chapman is kept busy carefully counting all letters, papers and packages which pass through his hands. Twice a year the department makes this demand upon the postmasters of the country.

Mr. Hartley, of Manchester, England, inspected the industries of our town last Friday, and expressed his astonishment at the vast amount of business transacted in Deseronto. He is visiting this country as the guest of Mr. Kitchen, senior inspector of the Grand Trunk Railway, Belleville.

According to an old legend the baby's dimples marked the spots where angels' fingers touched the child in bearing it from heaven to earth, but unromantic doctors have a different explanation. They say that dimples probably result from defective development of a muscle. When the muscle is called into use the defective portion fails to respond, and a hollow is left into which the flesh and skin of the cheek for example, fall, and thus the dimple is formed.

A very pleasant parlor social was held last night at the hospitable residence of Mr. D. W. Dart, Mill street, under the auspices of the steady Gleasers of the Presbyterian congregation. The large party assembled enjoyed themselves with an infinite variety of games and other amusements. A mandolin orchestra contributed excellent music. Cakes and coffee were distributed by a zealous committee. A more happy time could not have been spent and the affair netted a handsome amount for the society.

Mr. T. Stapleton, formerly of Marysville, is now station master at Coteau above Montreal. It is a very important and busy junction point. He has a large staff to supervise as he is joint agent for the Grand Trunk, Canada Atlantic and Central Vermont Railways, and local and transfer agent for the Canadian Express Company. There close of the year 24 lodges in the province. The membership on Dec. 31st, was 19,445, the number of members initiated during the year being 2,122, reinitiated 138, admitted by card 166. The total amount expended in relief was 77,089.43; the number of who received sick benefits was 3,029, widows relieved 184, orphans who received relief 86. The total disbursements of the order were $56,910.36, while the receipts were $181,015.70. The funds invested reached the Sons of England lodge in this town and took a hearty interest in its welfare. The Tribune regrets that Deseronto is losing such a good citizen and with a host of friends here joins in wishing him and his family all success wherever their lot may be cast.

SEVERE ACCIDENT.
An accident occurred on the farm of Chester W. Neville, Ernestown, on Monday, by which a boy six years of age, named Mattie, who had been near a stump, was just above the wrist. He had gone out to pick up firewood a companion was splitting, and had reached over in such a way that the axe fell upon the outer side of his arm, and cut fully two-thirds of the arm, including one of the bones (the ulna) completely off. He ran into the house, where his grandmother, Mrs. Sweet, stepped the profuse hemorrhage.

DICK—LIGHTHALL—At Napanee, on the 6th inst., by Rev. J. S. Shorey, Mr. Daniel Dick to Miss Ida Lighthall, both of Deseronto.

WHAT SAYS P. MONEGAN?

WELL THIS IS WHAT HE SAID TO US ON THE 6TH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1893.

(Brookville Times)

For several years past my wife has suffered from great pain in her back and hips and a feeling of weight and pressing down. She would be taken so bad every two or three weeks that she could neither eat, sleep or rest for three or four days and nights. The doctor said it was piles and made her sit over hot water and gave her ointments and washes and I don't know what all—then the piles would bleed and she would get some relief, but the piles and the pain would never leave her entirely, and soon she would get laid up again. In this way she continued to get worse and worse, though she tried a great many things from the doctors and others. Well I think it was along in August, or perhaps September last, she took the worst spell she ever had and though the piles bled freely she got no ease at all. She had no appetite and could not sleep, sit or lie for the pain. At this time we were told to try "Magic Lotion." We did so and in less than an hour she got ease and fell asleep, the first she had got for three days and nights. In less than a week she was about the house attending to her work and she has had no return now for nearly five months. It was a lucky thing we got that Magic Lotion and we hear many others giving it praise. We have used it for chapped hands this winter and it cures them in one night.

(Signed) P. MONEGAN.

Magic Lotion is a most reliable and prompt remedy for all those diseases and ailments for which it is recommended on the Covers and Labels, and many other afflictions of like character. It is prepared only by the Salvator-Magnus Medicine Co. of Brookville, Ont., who also manufacture the great lung remedy "SALVATOR-MAGNUS," and that unrivaled cough mixture "MAGNUS-EXPECTORANT." These medicines are for sale by all regular Druggists.

NEW ONTARIO.

A PROMISING FIELD OF SETTLEMENT FOR THE EMIGRATING SETTLERS.

DEAR SIR,—As I am an old resident of the Counties of Hastings and Peterborough and as the newspapers all over are saying a good deal about Eastern Alberta, particularly as to the words from me may be of interest to some of the readers of your widely read journal.

I had been in Eastern Alberta for over six years, whilst my brothers Alex. and John have been living in the district for over a year and a half. I have several times been to the government land office and have been to the Eastern Alberta and have been to the Peterborough and Ontario counties before I moved to New Ontario, as it has lately been called.

It is expected there will be a big immigration into this district commencing next summer and I can confidentially advise the young farmers of Hastings and Peterborough counties who are thinking of emigrating to come and see Alberta before they go further and farther west. There are several advantages which this district offers over other fields of immigration; amongst others I may mention the following:

1. It is the nearest and most convenient field of immigration and is easily and cheaply reached. Sault Ste. Marie, the district town of Eastern Alberta, and the center of the district, being within twenty-four hours of Montreal or Toronto.

2. People in Eastern Alberta are not troubled with blizzards in winter or disastrous storms or hurricanes in summer. I may say we have not suffered nearly as much winter weather as they have either in the North West Territories, Manitoba, the Western States or Old Ontario as one can see by the newspapers. In fact, by a few instances have our trains been delayed at all this winter and then only for a few hours. Old Ontario and Eastern Alberta have been frequently delayed this winter and frequently delayed by snow blockades, while I read that in Manitoba and the North West people have suffered greatly by reason of snow blockades and blizzards.

3. There is abundance of sweet spring water all over this district. Springs and spring creeks on nearly every quarter section of land in the district, in fact it would be hard to find a farm either on the north shore of Lake Superior which has not spring water.

4. The clover is indigenous to the soil and grows everywhere.

5. Directly the snow goes away, the grass comes out green and stays green and luxuriant all summer, does not wither or get parched and brown as in Old Ontario and other countries. For the last three seasons this country may be considered the best sheep and cattle raising country and dairymaking country which can be found anywhere.

6. There are splendid markets all over this district. A home market for everything a farmer can raise, market for fruit-growers can raise or grow. As to what can be grown in this district: Wheat, fall and spring, does excellently well both on north and south slopes, also oats and the coarser grains, roots of all kinds do very well. The hay crop never fails, the average yield being two to two and one-half tons per acre. Apples do well, especially the hardier kinds, and farmers are commencing to plant out orchards. Plums, cherries, currants, strawberries, raspberries, etc., also do well in fact everything which can be or is usually grown on a farm or in a garden does well here. There were some splendid exhibits of Bartlett pears and several varieties of apples at the last fall District Exhibition at Sault Ste. Marie and there is no doubt fruit growing can be made a great success in Eastern Alberta. If anyone wants to see good exhibits of grains of all kinds, grasses, etc., they should see the exhibit in the office of Mr. John Dawson, the President of the Eastern Alberta Electoral Division Agricultural Society at Sault Ste. Marie and the exhibit in the office of the Algoma Colonization Society in Sault Ste. Marie. I have also shown the latter society anyone interested in Eastern Alberta, either its agricultural resources or its mineral or timber resources should drop a post card to the secretary of that society, (Fred Rogers Esq., B.C.L., Barrister, &c., Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario), and he will receive a copy of the booklet pamphlet recently issued by that society for the use of intending settlers, entitled "Algoma Farmers Testify." This work contains letters from actual settlers from actual settlers all over the district and a large amount of general information as to the many and great resources of Eastern Alberta. People for Eastern Alberta should also drop a post card to me at Sault Ste. Marie, or to my brothers Alex. and John Boya at Thebes, Ontario, and they will be glad to give me any information in my power at any time or will be glad if they call and see us personally.

We would advise everyone interested in Alberta to send for a copy of the book or pamphlet I have mentioned. It contains a map of the district, showing the railway route, steamboat ports, etc.

CHICKENS ON THE FARM.

A generation ago the chickens to be seen around the average farm-house were of a red and a highland breed. There are now a few who keep such poultry; there are also farmers who do not believe that the world is round and revolve on its axis every twenty-four hours. But farmers so careless of their poultry are as much as a scoundrel to the farmer who is a little more careful about the rotation of crops and the value of silage, but you have to go far inland to find one who has not his preference between Plymouth Rocks, Leghorns, Langshans, Cochins, and Brahmas. Chickens on a farm are a kind of savings bank, and those who buy the most eggs and feth the highest prices are very naturally more highly esteemed. The latter fancy fowls in this country, and breed better chickens in this country, and they continue to lead in the experiments looking towards the further betterment of domestic fowls. There is one thing that has been insisted on in vain, so far as ordinary farmers are concerned. That is the value of cleanliness—cleanliness in the chicken-houses and cleanliness in the food and water given to the fowls. Unclean houses are productive of all kinds of disease, and unclean food and water also. There is an old fashioned notion that chickens are good scavengers, and if allowed the freedom of the barnyard they will forage for themselves. This is true, but it is very unlikely that any cock or hen from such a range would ever take a prize in a county show. The way to get prize chickens is to mate the best with the best, and rear the broods with care. As the reward, both in profit and satisfaction is well worth the trouble, it seems strange that any country people should be content with any but the best.

Dick's Condition Powders Fattens Horses and Cattle

At Quincy, Mass., Sunday, Joseph Massey attempted to kill Mary Victoria Lafay by firing three bullets in her, and then committed suicide by shooting himself. The girl will probably die. Unrequited love and jealousy are given as the cause.

NAPANEE ROAD.

From Our Own Correspondent

Mr. Editor kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper for our Napanee Road news and oblige.

Fine spring weather Monday and Tuesday. The roads are in a very bad state, neither wheeling nor sleighing.

Breaking colts is all the go just now. Mendie's Kimmerly has purchased a fine team of horses. Some young lady will have to take a swift ride this summer.

Sugar making will soon begin. Mr. Wm. Hudson had five sheep killed by neighbors' dogs and three badly bitten.

Mr. John W. Thompson has been tearing down the kitchen of his house. Messrs. Manly Conger and Ed. Sager have ceased drawing sand for want of sleighing or good wheeling.

Mr. John W. Rooks and family intend leaving next Monday for Manitoba where they will purchase land.

Messrs. Robert Bowen and Allen Oliver are busy day and night looking after the interest of the Deseronto Creamery and Butter Factory; wish them all success.

It is reported that James Oliver, one of our Road boys, has purchased James Leverton's farm in this concession.

We are sorry to hear that Fred Sexsmith is very low.

Mr. James Leverton will occupy the house where John Rooks lives.

KINGSFORD.

From Our Own Correspondent

Mr. John Blate, of Madison, Wis., is renewing the association of his youth. He is staying at present with his brother, Mr. Jas. Blate, Jr. He has been absent from his native Richmond for eighteen years.

Mrs. Ralph Abbott, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Wm. McKee, of Deseronto.

Messrs. John and David McAllister have begun house-keeping on their own account at the homestead on the 6th concession of Richmond.

Mr. Arch. McCollough has rented the farm of Mrs. Walsh, of 4th concession of Tyndinaga. Rumor has it that he is about to take up his residence on it—not however in lonely bachelorhood, but accompanied by one of Richmond's fairest daughters.

In consequence of Miss Wilson's funeral on Sunday last the pastor of St. Jude's was unable to fulfill his engagement here. Services next Sunday at 3 p.m.

A fine stable is being erected for the incumbent's horse in connection with the new shed at St. Jude's. The ranchmen will all be lured with hay and with oats.

TAMWORTH.

From Our Own Correspondent

The sleighing in this section is almost gone and some of our spring birds have put in their appearance.

Mr. C. R. Jones has purchased a fine thoroughbred horse from the late Mr. W. D. Mac has started up his saw mill, he has a fine assortment of logs this year.

Mr. Charles Sherman returned home last week from Rochester, N.Y.

Mrs. John Wheeler is improving nicely at present.

Mr. and Mrs. John O'Brien spent Sunday last in Napanee.

Mr. Patrick Hays is at work again at L. J. Wells.

Mr. T. F. Hodge, of the Tichenborne House, Napanee, was in town this week.

The Foresters have engaged Sarah Lord Bailey to appear on Friday night the 24th. She should be a success as a dramatic reader and no doubt will have a full house.

The sick are: Mrs. W. J. Fuller, Mrs. John Sherman and Howard Armstrong.

Mr. Wm. Fraser, of Mrs. Frankin at Mrs. Sherman's; Mr. Wm. Hager at Mrs. Walter's.

BLESSINGTON.

From Our Own Correspondent

Farmers are preparing for the sugar making season which they think is close at hand.

Wegons are now taking the place of sleighs. Mr. Harry Phillips and wife, who have returned from Rochester spent Sunday as guests of Mr. M. Ross.

Mr. Richard Connel sold his farm stock and implements at auction on Friday last.

Mr. Henry Swan has returned from England where a large fortune was left to him by some relatives and will leave in a short time for his home where he will probably make his future home.

While engaged in a scuffle on the ice at school, Richard King fell spraining his ankle and is not able to get around yet.

A skating party was held on Mr. Denike's marsh on Monday evening, bonfires were lighted and the evening was spent very merrily.

While returning from church on Sunday evening some young parties discovered that their cutter was elevated on two medium sized saw logs and they were enjoying a pleasant down hill ride which probably reminded them of olden times when carriages were plentiful.

Who played such a rude joke on such innocent people is a mystery. However suspicion points to "Texas" and probably "Uncle Sam" had a finger in the pie.

The singing school at this place has broken up on account of the bad roads.

SOLMESVILLE.

From Our Own Correspondent

Mr. C. P. is doing sand to make extensive repairs to his cellar.

Mr. R. A. Brooks is busy hauling lumber for the erection of a silo.

Mrs. D. B. Solmes is visiting her daughter, Mrs. G. Clinton, Belleville.

The late thaw has weakened the ice. There is no crossing at Patric's Ferry, and the only way to get over is by crossing from the cove below, or at Spencer's above the ferry. Engineers of the department of marine have been surveying the bay in this section. It is said that government may blast out some of the rock in the shallow portion of the channel to the vicinity of Telegraph road.

Mr. Frank Solmes is collecting material to build a hop pen on a large scale.

Messrs. John Lambert and Co. are hauling lumber for the erection of a new house.

The ladies of Deseronto are cordially invited to visit Mrs. Dalton's millinery rooms on St. George Street, the spring opening being still in progress.

ROSLIN.

From Our Own Correspondent

Mr. R. Palmer had a cow nearly killed by the train last Wednesday.

The Hodgeville stage goes on wheels from Roslin to Belleville.

Mrs. James Huggins, of Plainfield, is very ill, suffering from enlargement of the heart.

Mr. James Hall cut his foot the day following his marriage.

The Roslin folk are erecting a new cheese factory about one mile and a half from the village.

Mrs. W. W. Robin's eldest daughter has been very ill, but is now recovering slowly.

Mrs. Winters, of Richmond, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. A. Lloyd, of Thurlow, during the past two weeks.

Mr. McCall, of Belleville, is very ill.

Mr. Daniel Phillips, tax collector of Thurlow, has been very low all winter. The doctor holds no hope at all for his recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones, of Thurlow, were visiting their daughter in Huntington last Sunday.

Rev. H. B. Wilson, of Plainfield circuit, has started revival meetings at the Zion Hill appointment.

The Patrons of Industry have made a great reduction in the price of their goods before they started they had everything so high that the farmers could not buy anything in reason at all, but now any person can buy at a reasonable rate anywhere.

Mr. Hoves and his boys were in the woods cutting wood last week. They fell a large elm tree which contained seven large casks. They captured four of them and the remainder escaped to save their lives.

Many of our boys in this district are making preparations for going down to the eastern country to make cheese next season.

Mr. Miller Mott, teacher of Mount Carmel school section, proposes holding a school concert on the 24th inst. in aid of the school.

SHANNONVILLE.

From Our Own Correspondent

Mr. Allison, of Adolphstown, was the guest of his aunt, Mrs. D. L. Brown, on Sunday last.

Mr. H. Randall, of Detroit, was the guest of his uncle, Mr. A. B. Randall, last week.

Mr. Ed. Grills has purchased a residence on Queen street, moved last week.

Mr. D. L. Brown has moved in our village and occupies the residence of A. A. Roberts.

Mr. S. A. Rolph, of Ottawa, and Mrs. B. Rolph, of Thurlow, were in town.

Mr. Call home last week to see their father, Mr. M. Beckwith, who is seriously ill.

Mrs. Andrew Hewitt on Monday eve last for Manitoba. About thirty of her friends, gathered at the depot to see her off. We wish them all happiness in their new home.

The tea meeting on Sunday evening last of the Methodist church was a success; proceeds amounted to $57.

Rev. A. L. Adam was taken ill while conducting the service on Sunday evening last, and is still confined to his house.

R. F. Pagan is selling furniture of the best quality at very low prices. Undertaking in all its branches; no extra charge to parties living in the northern part of the township. Furniture carried at short notice. Call and see him at Milltown.

MOHAWKS OF THE BAY OF QUINTE.

In the Annual Report of the Department of Indian Affairs for the year ending December 31st, 1892, we find the following report made to the Department by Mr. Matthew Hill, Indian Agent at Tyndinaga Reserve:

COUNTY OF HASTINGS, TYNDINAGA AGENCY. SHANNONVILLE, Ont., 29th Aug., 1892.

The Honourable, The Superintendent General of Indian Affairs, Ottawa.

SIR,—I have the honour to submit my annual report and tabular statement for the year ended 30th June, 1892.

The band now numbers one thousand one hundred and twenty, being the result of forty-one births and twenty-one deaths, while five have emigrated and three been adopted into the band.

The sanitary condition of the people is good. Doctors Newton and Whitman attend to their physical wants, while the reserve, under the supervision of the Rev. G. A. Anderson, missionary, who spends his time after their spiritual needs, very effectively.

The crops were good last year and provisions plentiful.

A number who have given their attention to farming and gardening are fairly prosperous; while others find employment in the mills of the Rathbun Company at Deseronto, and thereby obtain a comfortable living.

The sobriety and morality of the band is improving and is fairly good.

The interest money distributed among the people, during the year, amounted to $4,301.14, and the annual supply of blankets was distributed among the aged and infirm Indians.

I have the honour to be, Sir, Your obedient servant, MATTHEW HILL, Indian Agent.

COMMERCIAL CABLE.

The annual meeting of the Commercial Cable Co. was held in New York on 20th. The financial statements submitted showed that the net assets of the company for the year 1892 amounted to $1,009,587, equivalent to 14 1/2 per cent. on the capital stock. On Jan. 15, 1892, the company paid $800,000 of its 1892, the company paid $800,000 of its 1892,

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrup, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and cures feverishness. Castoria prevents Vomiting, Four Cuts, cures Diarrhea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulence. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Conner,

Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various narcotics which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other harmful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. E. Freeman,

Cowley, Mass.

Castoria.

"Castoria is well adapted to children and is recommended by experienced physicians known to me."

Dr. A. A. Archer, M. D.,

111 So. 1st St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have a special liking for this preparation of their entire practice with Castoria, and although we only have a small stock of medicine supplies what is known as 'regular' products, we have no hesitation in saying that the use of Castoria is well adapted to children."

Dr. J. E. Freeman,

Cowley, Mass.

W. Kerr, Colborne; Theodore C. Fraser, Chas. E. Bartlett and M. J. Parrott, Niagara. It is expected the property, consisting of 487 acres, will be sold in about thirty days.

Pauline Bigelow in the April number of Harper's Magazine will continue the entertaining story of his adventures and observations in Western Russia. Having been invited by a Russian nobleman to spend a few days "in the barracks of the Czar," he made the most of his opportunities, and military service and army life which will be new to American readers. His article will be illustrated with a number of striking pictures drawn by Frederic Remington.

There was no meeting of the town council held last week.

A robin was heard singing in Central park yesterday afternoon.

Elastic strong enough to kill a Thomas cat for sale at the Target office.

Mr. George Harper, of Kingston, is visiting friends at the Methodist parsonage.

Mr. Thomas Pigen is temporarily filling the position of superintendent of the Deseronto cemetery.

The weather is characterized by cold easterly winds spring is delayed very much in consequence.

The streets are nearly all bare of snow, and the country roads are neither fit for sleighing nor walking.

Mr. Sandy Armstrong, the well known painter, has returned home from Denver, where he passed the winter.

Mr. Harvey Hopkins is spending a few days in town visiting old friends. He is in the midst of the summer in Bracebridge where he has accepted an excellent position.

It is proposed to take action under the "Adulteration Act" and prosecute several parties who are selling maple sugar and maple syrup in Deseronto on Tuesday.

The designation "maple" applied to only a great strain on charity and truth.

We have received a copy of the "Pharmacy Bill" which will be submitted to the legislative assembly next session. Many of the sections are altogether unreasonable in their terms, and no sane assembly of legislators could possibly permit this bill to become law.

There was a great flutter among the ladies of the town last Saturday caused by Mrs. Dalton's millinery opening. There was a general movement of the fair sex to the rooms on St. George street, where Mrs. Dalton, Miss Cherry and their staff were kept busy all afternoon and evening showing the visitors all the new styles in hats and bonnets. The opening was a conspicuous success in every respect.

Mrs. Charles J. Henstridge, who had been suffering from pneumonia, died last Friday afternoon after only two weeks' illness. The cause of death was unexpected death was heard with deepest regret by all members of the community. She leaves a husband and daughter to mourn their great loss.

The remains were taken to Gananoque by train on Saturday forenoon, many friends accompanying them to Deseronto Junction. The funeral took place at Gananoque on Sunday afternoon.

Frederichsburg Ferry. It is about time that our business men were taking steps to have the ferry to Frederichsburg continued during the coming season. It was a great benefit to Deseronto last year and would be great if it were continued.

Fire at Slaven's.

A quantity of paper caught fire in Slaven's store last night. Some ribbons and millinery goods were ignited. Mr. Slaven threw his coat and some clothing on the flames and with assistance from the meat market succeeded in preventing a conflagration.

The Banner School.

The Sunday school of the Church of the Redeemer is the banner school in the Presbytery of Kingston as far as number of pupils is concerned, the number being 310. It is second in average attendance, as the school in connection with St. Andrew's church, Kingston, had an average attendance of 219 out of 245 on the roll. This is a splendid average, truly. Deseronto school had only 190; there is no reason why this average cannot be vastly increased.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Donald Anderson, of Melrose, was in town on Monday.

Mr. Jacob S. Foster, of Northport, was in town last Sunday.

Mrs. Wm. Stoddard is recovering from her recent illness.

Mr. J. M. Poiras went east last Monday on official business.

Mr. Thomas Callaghan, of Campbellford, and Mr. Joseph Clairmont, agent for the Rathbun Company at Gravenhurst, were in Deseronto last Monday.

Mr. G. Collins, treasurer of the Central Ontario Railway, Trenton, together with his wife and children, were the guests of Mr. J. A. Snook, Main street, last Sunday.

Mr. & Mrs. C. O. Dorn returned home last Saturday from a very pleasant visit of six weeks among friends in Pictou and other parts of Prince Edward County.

Mr. W. J. McGrath, book-keeper for Messrs. Hodson Bros., of Belleville, spent a few days in town during the past week renewing former acquaintances.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Services last Sunday were very interesting and largely attended. The attendance at Sunday School was the largest in its history apart from special occasions. Next Sunday services will be conducted by the pastor, who will conclude in the evening last evening's subject, viz., "Foolishness of Wisdom." Heavy invitation is extended to all. The Parish social last Friday evening at the residence of Mr. John T. Grestia was unprecedentedly successful. It was a most enjoyable occasion, a large attendance, and over $20.00 receipts at the door.

SARAH LORD RAILLY.

Great interest is beginning to centre in the Sarah Lord Railly Lecture next Wednesday evening. All-ready tickets are selling freely, and the prospects are good for a repetition of Mrs. Railly's former success a year ago. Among her favorite readings next Wednesday evening will be "Lily's Ride," "Judgement Day," "Cred of the Bells," and "Royal Bumper Degree." Don't miss the great treat in store for patrons next Wednesday evening at the Methodist church. The readings will be interspersed with musical selections, vocal and instrumental. Prof. Denmark's Mandolin Club, will take part, and a talented young Banjoist from Kingston will kindly assist. Adults, 25 cents, children 15 cents. Reserve seats 35 cents. Plan at G. E. Seider's.

GENTLE SPRING.

W. G. Egar says he has more and better wall paper than ever before shown in Deseronto, and the variety of patterns are without number. He has everything that is needed for housecleaning and disinfection. Drugs and medicines for the millions. Books of all kinds with stationery by the cartload. Just call and see the goods and you will be satisfied.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsville, Ind., says: "I had been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness. Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion which my health was gone. I bought one bottle of South American Nerve, which done me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy." A trial will convince you. Sold by W. G. Egar. 3152

EARLY STEAMBOATS AND STEAM SHIPS.

Mr. Sandford Fleming at a recent meeting of the Canadian Institute read an interesting paper on early steamboats and early steamships. Several of the facts presented will be of interest to readers of THE TRIBUNE. There are many records of attempts to propel vessels by steam before the beginning of the century. The first successful vessel was that of Mr. Miller, on Dalnawish Loch in Scotland in 1789 and of Mr. Symington on the Clyde in 1789. These and other inventors devoted much time and money to accomplish the object they had in view. In 1807 the first steamboat appeared on the St. Lawrence. This was the Accommodation, built by John Molson, of Montreal. She was 30 feet long, 10 feet keel and 85 feet long on deck. She made the distance from Montreal to Quebec in 36 hours sailing time. Other countries followed suit. As far as investigation shows regular steamboats were seen for the first time in the following order: on the Hudson in 1807; St. Lawrence in 1809; Clyde in 1812; Severn in 1813; Mississippi in 1814; Humber in 1814; it was 1815 before they appeared on the Thames, England; and some years later the Frontenac appeared on the list, that launched on the Clyde in 1812 was built by Henry Bell and named the Comet. A monument has been erected to his memory on the River Clyde.

The United States and Canada both claim the honor of building the first steamship to cross the Atlantic, but a consideration of all the facts lead to the conviction that the Dominion is entitled to the exclusive distinction. Those who favor the claim of the United States found their argument on the ship Savannah, a vessel built in New York, and launched on August 22nd, 1819. She was 200 feet long, 27 feet beam, 10 feet keel and 100 feet long on deck. A steam engine was placed on deck, and shifting paddle wheels were contrived so that they could be lowered over the sides of the vessel in calm weather and brought again on deck when the wind rose. She had small capacity for coal and some assert that she burned only wood. She was simply then a sailing ship, which in suitable weather made use of paddle wheels. The Savannah crossed the Atlantic in 1819, leaving the port of Savannah May 22nd and reaching New York pool 26th thus making the passage in less than thirty days. It is stated that steam was used over eighteen days, and the log records that the paddle wheels were used for a few hours at a time when the condition of wind and sea admitted, but it is obvious that the sails were chiefly depended upon to make the voyage. There is no mention as to the paddle having been used on the return voyage and on her return to America the machinery was removed and she assumed her original character as a sailing ship. The Savannah the fullest credit for all that may be due to her, it cannot be affirmed that she crossed the Atlantic under steam, nor can it be pretended that she was the pioneer of the ocean steamship service of today in any sense. The only other example on record of a vessel similar to the Savannah is the Enterprise, a ship which made a voyage in 1825 to India assisted by steam.

The first steamship to cross the Atlantic was the Royal William, a vessel built by a joint stock company at the yard of Campbell & Black in Quebec, in the year 1830-31. The designer of the ship and superintendent of its construction was James Goudie, born in Quebec 1809, and who died 1892. The ship was launched in 1831 with more than ordinary ceremony and was named after King William IV, then on the throne. The ship was towed to Montreal to receive her machinery, and on being fitted for sea, her first voyage was to Halifax. Before setting out for England, she traded between Quebec, Halifax and Boston, and was the first British steamer to arrive at the latter port. In the list of owners appears the names of the three brothers Joseph, Henry and Samuel Cunard, of Halifax. Her dimensions were: length 160 feet; hold 17 feet 2 inches; breadth outside 44 feet; breadth between paddle boxes 23 feet; she had three masts schooner rigged; builder's measurement 1,370 tons; with accommodation for sixty passengers. The engine, boiler and machinery, were furnished by St. Mary's foundry, Montreal. The Royal William left Quebec for London August 6th, 1836, calling at Pictou, N.S., to receive coal and overland machinery. She restarted from Pictou, August 15th, with seven passengers, 254 children of coal and a light cargo. She encountered a terrific gale on the banks of Newfoundland which disabled one of her engines. The passage from Pictou to London occupied 25 days. Ten days after her arrival in London, she was chartered by the Portuguese government to enter the service of Don Pedro as a troop ship. In 1834 she was sold to the Spanish government, who converted her into a war steamer, and under the new name of Isabel Segunda she was employed against Don Carlos, and it is actually believed that she was the earliest steamer of war in the history of nations to deliver a hostile shot. After an eventful service for some years she was sent to Bordeaux for repairs, when her timbers were found to be so completely rotten that she was abandoned in serviceable condition, and was transferred to a new vessel, a second Isabel Segunda, to form part of the Spanish fleet. What was left of the original "Royal William" remained a hulk in the French port.

The Canadian built Royal William undoubtedly proved to be the pioneer of Atlantic steamships. She was the forerunner of the great Cunard line. Sir Samuel Cunard, with two brothers, were part owners of the vessel. Sir Samuel was a man of great business ability. The vessel which attended the experiment convinced him that sailing ships as mail packets were doomed. He at once grasped the situation and bent all his energies to obtain a contract for carrying the mails and finally succeeded in 1835. Four steamships were at once ordered and the construction and fitting out of the vessels proved the beginning of the magnificent fleet of steamships which ever since have borne the honoured name of Cunard.

proud of the distinction thus gained for their country by these pioneer naval architects, engineers and business men, and, as Mr. Fleming suggests, some action should be taken to suitably commemorate their achievements.

DEATH OF AN AGED RESIDENT.

Capt. Isaac Morden, one of the oldest and most respected residents of the Bay district, died at his residence, Northport, at 9 a.m. Saturday, March 18th, aged 79 years, 5 months and 18 days. The deceased was born at Northport on Sept. 30th, 1799, and was the son of James and Margaret Morden. Mr. James Morden, father of the deceased, was one of the United Empire Loyalists, who first settled on the shores of the Bay of Quinte. He belonged to the King's Royal Provincial Regiment of New York State, Sir J. Johnson, commander, and was discharged in 1785 at Montreal. He was the first person who built at the present village of Northport; his wife's maiden name was the Bay of Quinte. Here he lived and lived all his life in Northport, his residence being the stone house about one quarter of a mile from that village, facing on the shore of the Bay of Quinte. Here he lived and prospered as a successful farmer, and was held in high respect by people of all classes. He married Miss Lucy Craig, by whom he had four children, one son and three daughters. His wife died several years ago, and his son William died in 1847. His three daughters still survive: Mrs. John Baker, of Michigan; Mrs. Jas. Redner, of Redensville, and Mrs. Wm. Wilson, who lived in the homestead with her father until a captain's commission in the militia, and commanded a troop of cavalry during the rebellion. The order of the day, "The deceased was a prosperous farmer, and gave great attention to raising horses, in which he was very successful. It was he who first developed the Tippe Tip breed, which gained such a name in later years. He was in great demand as a judge of horses at the various fairs, and frequently secured in the capacity at Kingston and other leading centres of the district. He was ever distinguished for his kind and courteous bearing, and this he maintained until the last. He was distinguished for his wonderful memory of past events, and could give day and night on which circumstances occurred to a date, which was truly marvellous. He was only sick a few days, and retained his mental faculties to the last hours of his illness. He died peacefully, and was buried in the Church of England. The funeral, which was very numerous attended, took place on Monday afternoon. As deceased had been connected with the order of Odd Fellows the members of the local lodge attended in a body. Flags were flying at half-mast in the village of Northport as a mark of respect to the memory of the aged pioneer. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Loucks, of Pictou, who took as his text Malachi 3: 17, from which he delivered an eloquent sermon. The remains were subsequently interred in the Lazer cemetery, near Northport.

KILLED AT NAPANE.

At Napane about two o'clock Friday, 17th inst., a sad accident occurred, whereby a young man lost his life. John Vanalentine, messenger for the Long Lake express company, son of Irvine Vanalentine, went to the station to secure a piano for F. W. Hart. The piano was placed on the sleigh, and John's men were letting it down flat on the sleigh when Vanalentine's feet slipped through his footboard. The support having been withdrawn, the piano fell, it fell full head under it. Those assisting were almost paralyzed when they saw what had taken place. They quickly lifted the piano, and found the victim lying face down, his head under it. Medical aid was summoned, and he was carried into the residence of James Richardson, of the C.T.R., who lives close by. The doctor pronounced death as instantaneous. Those who were helping with the piano, say he never uttered a sound after the instrument fell. Deceased was a young man about twenty-eight years of age, was married and leaves a wife and several children. He was universally respected, being of genial disposition. The sad accident has cast a gloom over that town.

"Squire" Abingdon, backer of pugilists, race horse owner and gentleman jockey, and general exponent of fast living, died of pneumonia at New Orleans on Saturday, April 31. His income was £100,000.

WHAT SAYS P. MONEGAN?

WELL THIS IS WHAT HE SAID TO US ON THE 6th DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1893.

(Brookville Times)
For several years past my wife has suffered from great pain in her back and hips and a feeling of weight and pressing down. She would sit down, but every two or three weeks that she could neither sit, sleep nor rest for three or four days and nights. The doctor said it was rheumatism, and made her rest over hot water and gave her ointments and washes and I don't know what all—then the pain would be taken off, but she would get worse and worse, and the pain would never leave her entirely, and soon she would get laid up again. In this way she continued to get worse and worse, though she tried a great many things from the doctors and others. Well I think it was along in August or perhaps September last, she took the worst spell she ever had and though the pills did freely she got no ease at all. She had no appetite and could not sleep, sit or lie for the pain. At this time we were told to try "Magie's Lotion". We did so and in less than an hour she got ease and fell asleep, the first she had got for three days and nights. In less than a week she was about the house attending to her work and she has had no return now for nearly five months. It was a lucky thing we got that Magie's Lotion and we hear many others giving it praise. We have used it for it for chapped hands this winter and it cures them in one night.

(Signed) P. MONEGAN.

Magie's Lotion is a most reliable and potent remedy for all rheumatic and neuralgic ailments for which it is recommended on Cures and Labels, and many other affections of like character.

It is prepared only by the Salvo-Magie-Medicine Co. of Brookville, Ont., who also manufacture the great lung remedy "SALVO-MAGIE" and that unrivalled cough mixture "MAGIE'S EXpectorant". These medicines are for sale by all regular Druggists.

her daughter, Mrs. C. Simpson.

Mr. Hoover and Miss Hoover, of Picton, were visiting at Mr. James McLaren's last week.

Those who are fortunate enough to possess

a maple woods are now busy gathering the sap and converting it into delicious maple syrup and sugar.

Our teacher Mr. Charles Simpson, is suffering from an attack of diphtheria and the school is accordingly closed.

In a previous correspondence we mentioned that Mr. Kennedy, of Northport, had leased

Mr. Connell's blacksmith shop, but different arrangements have been made and Mr.

Walsh, from the vicinity of Read, will take immediate possession.

ALBERT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Some of the foremen of spring have already appeared in our midst such as the robin and other migrating birds. And yet we are forced to look out upon a field of ice and snow

the heritage which departing winter has poured into the lap of spring in sufficient quantities to keep the flies away for some time.

The farmers are busy cutting their summer's supply of wood.

Sugar making is in full blast.

Measles and whooping cough are making the rounds in this locality.

Rumor has it that Richmond is about to lose one of her fair daughters.

Mr. Allen Cross lost one of his best cows

the other night.

Mr. Stephen Murphy met with an accident

the other day. While leading hay Mr.

Wright's barn the horses started ahead,

throwing him of the load to the ice below.

He received a severe cut over his left eye but is improving rapidly.

Mr. Philip Cross left last Thursday for Waterloo, N. Y., where he will spend the summer.

Mr. A. Lloyd, of Philipstown, Thurlow, is visiting at Mr. Richard McTaggart's.

Mrs. G. G. Winters with her son, of Selby, was visiting her brother, Mr. R. McTaggart,

this week.

Mr. J. Hudson, of Mount Pleasant, was visiting Mr. James Turnbull last Sunday.

WESTBROOK.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The roads are almost free of snow and the people think that spring has almost come.

Our young people have been taking advantage of the good skating during the past week

some lively times have been experienced.

Miss Lydia Jackson, Elginburg, spent last week visiting Miss E. Gates.

Mrs. A. Howie is slowly improving under the skill treatment of Dr. Mabee, of Oshawa.

Mr. Coulter, of Hinchinbrook, is moving to the farm of Jacob Gardner.

Miss Lizzie Sheehan left to-day to spend the week at Tyndinburg.

Rev. Mr. Bates occupied the pulpit in the

C. M. church on Sabbath last.

P. M. Grass is preparing for sugar making;

prospects are good for a big cake this spring.

TYNDENBURG RESERVE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Divine service (at D. V.) will be held in both churches on Good Friday at the usual hours.

We were pleased to see carpenter George

Maracle and family return from Caughnawaga

where they spent the winter.

Mr. Brant Powles one of our oldest inhabitants is seriously ill.

The annual meeting of the scavengers of Deseronto will be held in the hall of the Reserve on

"And," continued the young girl, brightly, "the freight question is getting to be a pretty serious one. Aunt Miranda holds some shares in the Briggsville Branch line, and thinks something could be done with the directors for a new tariff of charges if again, Miss Dows," hee said, gently dropping into her dialect with a winning but unconscious flattery, "I am going to ask you to teach me everything you wish—to be all that you demand—which would be far better. You knew was coming from it. I despise this foolishness as much as yo', but I can't run away from it. Come, co'nnie, I won't ask yo' to forget this, and, no!—I'll believe yo' meant it, but yo'll promise me yo' won't speak of it again."

LOCAL ITEMS.

County court sittings in banc, commence on Monday next.

Monday next, being Easter Monday, is a statutory bank holiday.

Many important announcements in our advertising column this week.

To-day, just eighty-six years ago, the slave trade was abolished by Britain.

Next Wednesday is the three hundred and ninety-fourth anniversary of the discovery of Canada.

There was an ice shove at Belleville on Tuesday afternoon and the lower portions of the city were inundated.

Railway tracks at this time of year suffer from the frost coming out of the ground. Careful driving is necessary.

The wind of yesterday broke up the ice wonderfully above town. There is nearly two miles of blue water in that direction.

The ice opposite the town and down the bay is still quite solid. Teams drove from Northport to Belleville the other day on the ice.

A little contretemps took place the other day between a functionary and the wife of an employee, but no blood was spilled and houses were dry.

Mr. Daniel Whelan had the end of one of his fingers crushed off last Saturday morning while coupling cars. Dr. Vanderwolf attended to his injuries.

Dr. Oroschak, Supreme Chief Ranger of the Independent Order of Foresters, is expected to be present at the meeting of Court Deseronto, No. 83, this evening.

Among other events booked for the Deseronto opera house next month are the Decker Bros' minstrel troupe and Harry W. Winchell in the grand drama, "Countryman."

Mr. D. B. Solmes, of Solmesville, was seriously injured on Monday by a fall, the back of his head striking with great force on the ice. He was reported yesterday as gradually recovering.

Rev. Father Kelly, secretary to Archbishop Cleary, arrived from Europe on Tuesday. He was absent five months, having been called away to the deathbed of his father in Waterford, Ireland.

Mr. Chas. J. Henstridge desires through the columns of THE TRIBUNE to thank his friends and neighbors for all the kindness and assistance which they so generously extended to him and his family in their recent affliction.

The Amptor Watchman is responsible for the statement that Mr. Noble Bennett, employed in Gillies' machine shop, Carlton Place, recently tempered a punch which punched 4,500 holes and was then not much the worse for wear.

Mr. George R. Smith desires to thank all the kind neighbors and especially the members of Deseronto Council, Royal Templars, for their great kindness and sympathy extended to himself and family in their affliction during the past week.

At the last meeting of Deseronto Council No. 289, Royal Templars of Temperance, resolutions of condolence were passed conveying the sympathy of the members to Mrs. C. J. Henstridge and George R. Smith in their recent bereavements.

A dispute arose between landlord and tenant in the west end of the town, last Saturday, but an amicable arrangement was arrived at without recourse to law, which at the preliminary stage of the proceedings appeared imminent. "All's well that ends well."

Mr. Charles Campbell, who was one of the early residents of Deseronto, left his house and its contents in Olden town, recently. Mr. Campbell was in town yesterday arranging for material, etc., to rebuild his premises. He fortunately carried $300 insurance.

Mr. W. J. Emerson sends us a copy of the Gladstone Age, a newly little sheet recently started at Gladstone, Man. Among other local items, we observe that "An evening with Emerson" was the theme with a happy gathering at the residence of Mr. W. J. Emerson last Friday evening.

The Bay of Quinte Meat Company will make a grand display of Easter beef, etc., to-morrow. They receive a number of fine beef cattle from Toronto this week. The animals averaged 118 lbs. per head, and visitors are invited to call Saturday morning and inspect their display.

Rev. R. J. Craig was in Belleville on Monday attending the funeral of Mr. George Maclean, son of the Rev. M. W. Maclean, who died recently in California. The funeral was very numerous, attended by many friends coming long distances to be present. Mr. Craig was one of the bearers.

The weather during the past week has been backward, being clear and cold, the winds being chiefly from the northeast and northwest. Yesterday it was quite stormy for a few hours in the morning with showers of snow. Warm rains are much needed to melt the snow, which still remains in the woods and back townships.

George Neesley, aged 45 years, living about five miles south of Sharbot Lake, committed suicide Tuesday morning by cutting his throat with a case knife while laboring under temporary insanity. He informed his wife that he would commit suicide but no attention was paid to his threats. He is the father of five small children.

Mr. Thomas Roach, Jr., of Gananoque, has sold his property on the corner of Thomas and Prince street in this town to Mr. W. H. Vandriem. This is the fourth transfer of property which Mr. Roach has made during the past ten years in Deseronto and vicinity. Mr. Roach states that he has invariably found THE TRIBUNE an excellent medium for advertising purposes.

Miss Lake's millinery rooms were the scene last Saturday of a great number of bonnets of the latest fashion. The fair sex greatly admired the selection of hats, bonnets, millinery, etc., which Miss Lake and her busy staff had arranged for the occasion. The exhibit of new styles was greatly admired and evidenced much good taste on the part of the fair proprietor. The opening was very successful in every respect.

On Thursday last week, Thomas, the adopted son of Mr. J. A. Peterson, Hay Bay, while at school went out with some boys on an ice boat, when it struck some obstruction and the lad was thrown quite a distance his head striking the ice. He was carried to the schoolhouse by his companions and Dr. Newton was summoned. He remained unconscious and died during the night. It is probable that there was some internal fracture of a rib that had been formed on account of the shock. He was a smart boy, and about fourteen years of age.

Canoe Club.

The annual meeting of the Deseronto Canoe and Boating Club, for the election of officers and other business, will be held in the class room of the Mechanics' Institute at 8 o'clock Friday evening, 31st inst. A full attendance of the members is requested.

Concert.

A concert under the auspices of the Stedley Gleaners Society of the Church of the Redeemer will be given at the next week or the one following. The society have engaged some splendid foreign talent and guarantee a very first class affair. It will be held in the Deseronto Opera House.

Easter Meals.

Mr. Robt. H. Baker, market square has the choicest beef ever shown in town for his Easter trade. His lamb and mutton are far ahead of any offered in our markets, and with his choice meats of all descriptions he is sure to please his numerous customers who are desirous of toothsome meals for Easter.

A Young Artist.

We were shown a drawing book the other day containing specimens of drawing by Master Alphonse Vandeboncoeur, a part second book pupil in the department of the public school taught by Miss Menelly. They were exceedingly well executed for a lad of his age and school standing. He has evidently a talent for drawing which should be carefully cultivated.

Disorderly.

A citizen at the east end of Thomas street who is evidently anxious to get an application of the late nine-tails, recently used in his wife, choking her until she was black in the face and afterwards throwing her out of the house, to upset a lamp and fire to the house. Mr. A. Revere burst open the door and with other neighbors extinguished the flames. The racial still goes unquench.

Salvation Army.

A great Easter meeting will be held in the Salvation Army barracks on Wednesday evening, April 8th, when Divisional Officer Boulton, of Kingston, will bid farewell to this corps. Captain Cooke and Mrs. Ramone will also be present and deliver stirring addresses. Everybody welcome. Admission 5c. Services next Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 3 and 5 p. m. The army is doing good work under the direction of Capt. Bloss, who is a general favorite with Deseronto people.

Man's Cruelty.

Man's cruelty that ought to know better tied a large dog to the track near the Terra Cotta Works, on Thursday last week. The poor animal was cut in half by the train returning from the Junction, despite the efforts of the engineer to prevent it. There is a law to prevent people putting obstructions on a railroad track and it would cover a case of this kind. The authorities should spend some time in searching for the offender who should be severely punished for such murderous cruelty.

Fire at Northport.

The large brick dwelling owned by Mr. Henry Fox, about a quarter of a mile from Northport, was burned last Tuesday morning. Mr. Fox and another man were at work in the upper story of the house putting in a partition. The fire was caused by a board falling and breaking a glass jar filled with kerosene which was close by. The contents ran over the floor and caught fire, causing fire immediately. People from the town were soon on hand but the fire was too far advanced to save the house. A small quantity of the furniture was saved. Loss about $4,000; insurance $2,200.

Church of the Redeemer.

There were heavier services and large congregations at the Church of the Redeemer last Sunday. The meetings in the past week have been very successful. Next Sunday there will be communion service at 11 a. m. Rev. Dr. Smith will assist the pastor. The usual preparatory service will be held at 7 o'clock. The collection next Sunday will be in aid of the session fund. The Y. P. S. C. Endeavour will hold a consecration service at 8:30 p. m. All are invited to these different services.

Dairying Interests.

The Intelligence states that there are sixteen cheese factories in Hastings county and that these make three quarters of a million dollars' worth of cheese every year. These factories on the whole average 120,000 boxes a year, which call into service 25,000 cows. These figures show the magnitude of the dairying interest. Rawdon township takes the lead with ten factories, Madoc has nine, Sidney has seven, Thurlow seven, Tyendinag six (counting the factory of the Deseronto Creamery Company omitted from the Intelligence list and which would make sixty-eight in the county.) Hungerford 4, etc. The factories in Tyendinag are Shawville, Mountain, Milrose, Albert, Rosbud and Deseronto.

The Coorgre Concert Company.

This clever company made their second appearance in town on Thursday evening of last week to a large audience in the Opera House under the auspices of the Coorgre Co., O. F. The applause was frequent. Miss LaDell lent pleasant variety to the programme with her recitations, excellent in Lewis' famous piece "I am not mad." Her attitudes were much admired and showed careful study. Miss Ada "The Favorite" was greeted with applause and sustained her well earned reputation. Mr. A. E. Harvey, character vocalist, is a whole host in himself. He was repeatedly called back, and most cheerfully responded with the latest songs of the day. The various musical selections were much enjoyed and of such variety that the audience was not tired. The troupe is one of the best on the road and is deserving of the unstinted patronage of all who are desirous of the splendid work which had been done by the Mission under the guidance of Mr. Lowe and his predecessors. It was resolved to proceed forthwith with the erection of the proposed chapel, hearty support being freely guaranteed. The undersigned, a committee have had plans made by a competent architect. There was a very large assembly at the Mission on Sunday evening, when Mr. Lowe presented to the hearers the history entertained by very many scholars and travellers by which the North American Indians were instructed with the ten lost tribes of Israel, and deduced practical lessons therefrom.

MURDER NEAR GANANOQUE.

A fatal case of shooting occurred about eight miles east of Gananoque, between that town and Landdowns village, which John Fitzsimmons lost his life. The ownership of a horse and a small piece of land in the locality was in dispute. Fitzsimmons claimed it by right of purchase from all the heirs but one, and Mrs. Joles claimed it as her own, whose interest had not been purchased. Some weeks ago Mrs. Joles' family moved into the house and took possession, but they were subsequently ejected by Fitzsimmons and his sons. Several charges of assault were presented to the magistrates, and bad blood was thoroughly aroused. Fitzsimmons held possession of the property, and evidently was prepared to assert his rights against all comers. On Saturday Mrs. Joles and her family returned to the property, taking their effects. Charles Shipman, the alleged murderer, in Mrs. Joles' father, and his story is that he happened to be passing the place when his daughter reached the house with her things. They called him to assist them in unloading, and he went over to the house. As he stepped to the door Fitzsimmons stepped to the door and forbade them entering. Shipman attempted to parley with him, and tried to go in the house. He says that Fitzsimmons then fired several times with his revolver and the best Shipman unmercifully over the head with it. Shipman retreated and Fitzsimmons retired and closed the inside door. A son of Shipman, Thomas by name, was returning from duck shooting, having a loaded gun with him. His father took the gun, and, going to the door, called out that he was not afraid nor could he shoot too. He pointed the gun at the inside door, when it accidentally went off, the shot going through the door. Waving a few minutes, Shipman opened the door and found Fitzsimmons lying dead on the floor, the shot having penetrated the chest. Shipman subsequently surrounded himself to the authorities. Fitzsimmons was 57 years old. One of his sons is a merchant and postmaster at Rockport. The coroner's inquest resulted in a verdict of wilful murder being returned against Shipman, who has been committed to Brockville jail to stand his trial at the approaching assizes. Mr. and Mrs. Joles and their family may be held as accessories to the crime.

A MANITOBA LETTER.

Mr. W. J. Emerson, formerly of Deseronto, writing under date of March 15th from "Westmore Farm," Gladstone, Manitoba, to renew his subscription to THE TATLER, states: "This has been a peculiar year in many respects. The first peculiarity noticeable was the terrible blizzard of January, which came on the 27th of April, when people were thinking spring and warmth had really come. This was the worst and most unloading blizzard within the recollection of the oldest resident of this part, its only redeeming feature being that it was not so very cold. People thought that the crop would be late that year, but would surely be frozen; but the lateness of the spring was more than compensated for by the almost tropical growth, owing to the frequent rains and unusual heat of the summer. I began cutting wheat on the 15th of August, six days earlier than the previous year of 1891, so that I had my wheat entirely cut before the frost came. Although the crops in some parts of the province were not up to the average, still in the county of Westbourne they were excellent, and the yield was damaged by frost. The yield and quality were good, but to offset this the prices have been very poor. "This has been an exceedingly long winter, with some extremely cold weather during the latter part of January and fore part of February, the coldest morning here being on the 1st of February, when my thermometer registered 45 degrees below zero. The ground froze up on the 5th of November, and snow fell the next day and has remained ever since. There has been nothing to equal the excellence of the sleighing since I came to the country. The first fall of snow, coming early as it did, was damp, and lay evenly all over the country, so that there has been uninterrupted sleighing since Nov. 5th. "Some parts of this province are at a disadvantage in regard to cattle and horse raising, owing to a deficiency in the hay supply, but here not require hay, and are exceedingly profitable, so I fancy this province will be a great pork-producing part of the Dominion before many years. The low price of wheat has set many thinking in this direction. Barley is a safe and easy crop to raise, and comes in as excellent feed for pigs and hogs. "We are all in the enjoyment of the best of health at present, and have been throughout the year."

WOMEN ON DUTCH RAILWAYS.

Long Hours and Small Pay for Doing Comparatively Light Work. The British consul at The Hague says that, as regards the employment of women and children on railways, it is not the case that the latter are made use of at the several railway works, their parents being glad of the one or two florins they are able to earn for comparatively light work. They are occasionally put to similar work on the permanent way, being paid at the rate of 75 or 80 cents. The women are chiefly employed in cleaning the carriages, working on an average eight hours a day on the State railway, with light work on alternate Sundays, and getting 1 florin 25 cents wages per fortnight; on the Holland railway ten hours a day without Sunday work, with a daily wage of 1 florin 30 cents, or else watching the lines, turn about with their husbands the "wegwachters" or cantiniers. On the State railway their work averages twelve hours (the men taking the night duty) and they are paid at the rate of 25 cents a day being lodged by the husbands, averaging 80 cents a day. On the Holland railway the average hours of work are about the same, the women receiving pay at the rate of 25 cents a day, 1 florin 55 cents a week being, however, deducted for the lodging allowed them. For women with families the work is considered trying, especially when they are kept on duty as long as sixteen hours, as is the case at certain points, where the traffic happens to be very heavy. As regards the general conditions under which the persons in the employ of the great Dutch railway companies carry on their work, the testimony of the numerous witnesses examined by the commission, with few exceptions, went to show that they are well satisfied both as to the wages they receive and as to the treatment awarded them. One witness was of the opinion that the wage of railway servants compared favorably with those of most factory hands.

DANGER SIGNALS.

Those in Use on Railroads and Their Common Meaning.

"What is the danger signal?" asked Hal, who was beginning to consider these railroad signals as almost as important and well worth knowing as those in which he drilled his football team.

"Red for danger, green for caution and white for safety; flag by day and lantern by night," replied the railroad man, adding, "I am sure you must have noticed men at the road crossings waving white flags to show that the track was clear, as your train rushed by."

"Of course I have," answered Hal. "Sound the call for brakes and stop at once." There are other danger and cautionary signals I think you will be especially interested in," added his uncle. "Torpedoes and fuses, for instance. A torpedo upon the rail is one of the most used and most reliable in all the danger signals."

"But I shouldn't think it would be loud enough," objected Hal. "Why don't you use something louder,—say, cannon crackers?"

"Oh, you are thinking of the little paper-wrappers torpedoes such as children play with, but they are not the kind I mean. A railroad torpedo is a round tin box, just about the size of a silver dollar, filled with percussion powder. Attached to it are two little leaden strips that can be bent under the edges of the rail, so as to hold the torpedo firmly in position on top of it. In this position, when a locomotive wheel strikes it with the force of a sledge-hammer, it explodes with a report fully as loud as a cannon-cracker, that can be plainly heard above all other sounds of the train. It is a warning sufficient to arouse the engineman, and to render him keenly alert."

"If a train meets with any accident or obstruction that bids fair to cause a delay of more than a few seconds the engineman sounds five short whistle blasts (— — — — —). On hearing this signal the rear brakeman must immediately run back a quarter of a mile or so and place a torpedo on one of the rails that his train has just passed over. Then going back 200 yards further he places two more torpedoes, a rail's length apart. He then returns to the first torpedo, and with his red flag in hand stands there until the next train comes, and then blows down a train. On hearing this he picks up and takes with him the single torpedo, but leaves the other two where they are."

"These two torpedoes thus form a cautionary signal; and, translated by the next following engineman, mean, 'The train ahead of you has had an accident. Move cautiously and keep a sharp lookout.' The single torpedo is an imperative warning to apply the brakes. 'Shut off,' and 'Red for danger' immediately ahead."

"If a train is delayed at night, the rear brakeman is sometimes leaves an illuminated signal behind him. It is a fuse, which is a paper cone containing enough red fire, inextinguishable by wind or rain, to burn exactly five minutes, which is the shortest length of time allowed between two running trains. The engineman of a following train must stop when he comes to a fuse, and not move ahead again until it has burned out, though he can calculate from its condition just about how far ahead the next train is."—Kirk Munroe in St. Nicholas.

BLAKE A TRIANGLE.

Views of and About Him as a Family Man, a Politician and a Stump Speaker.

"Yes, Edward Blake is having a great time," says one who enjoys the unusual advantage of intimacy with the great Canadian. "I have no doubt the size of the man in which he is fighting, and the hundred and one things which are new to him in London have a certain attractiveness. He is the recipient of many social attentions, and has quite recently been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone at dinner parties, to which only the closest friends are invited. But he is one of the most domestic of men. His ambition is gratified in public life, but his heart is in his home, and it is a question with me, whether he considers the distinction which he gains in London a fair recompense for all the home joys that he forsook when he quitted Canada."

"There goes Edward Blake!" said an old time Ottawa newspaperman who was up from the Capital one day last Sunday. "He is a great man; but it was an ill day for the Grits when he became their leader. He is a regular iceberg. He would never give a thank you for all you could do for him. You might break yourself in two trying to serve him, and he'd pass you, just as he has passed me now. He has no use for newspapers. Oh no! I do not know anybody who despises newspapers and newspapermen more than he does. Yet I have sat in the press gallery and watched him wait as eagerly for the Globe as the humblest back-bencher who looked for a favourable notice of his first attack on the organ. I have seen the eye in his magnificent head linger lovingly over the paragraphs in which the Globe has given him his praise. Yes, sir, I have seen Edward Blake read over a puff of himself in the Globe four or five times. That persuaded me that five times in great men there are some pretty human streaks."

"No sir," said a Toronto Liberal who was reasonably close to Wilfrid Laurier. "Edward Blake will never again be leader of a Canadian party. To tell the truth, and the truth is what I am giving you, if the Liberal parliamentary delegation were polled I do not suppose he could get six votes as against Laurier. He is like the attachment of the Old Guard to St. John. Remember Mr. Blake is not an applicant for the throne of Opposition leader, nor is the Opposition an applicant for his service in that capacity, but I do expect that if the date of the Irish Home Rule question permits, Edward Blake will give the Liberal party the benefit of his invaluable experience, and so stump it is in Canada in the next general election season. I confidently look for his help, and I believe he would be no end of good to the party on the stump."—Telegraph.

I want to find a place for me
Where nature's harp is all in tune,
A calm, or a still, on life's rough sea,
A place where it's always afternoon.
A quiet, peaceful place somewhere
Between the tramp and the millionaire.

Where it's not all joy and not all pain;
Not too much shine, nor too much
shade;
Just a place to hide me from the rain;
An easy place where the rent is paid,
And not too close to the man of care,
And not too far from the millionaire.

—Clyde Warran, in N. Y. Sun.

The name was singularly appropriate, for assuredly Felice was the happiest of all four-footed creatures. Her nature was gentle; she was obedient, long-suffering, kind. She had known what it was to be told that she was beautiful, and she had suffered from hunger and from thirst, and before she came into the possession of Jacques she had been beaten, for Pierre, her former owner, was a cruel man. But she was now, by way a kind, faithful and gentle creature; presumably that was why they named her that pretty name, Felice. She may not have been happy when Pierre owned her, but she was happy now, and she was not beaten; that does not concern us now, for herein it is to tell of that time when she belonged to Jacques, and Jacques was a

But what perfected her happiness was the coming of her little colt, as cunning and as blithe a creature as ever whickered in the woods. He was a yearling, and he knew why they called him by that name. At Petit-Pontain was what they called a "cure," a priest, who was a good fellow, for when farmer Jacques came twice a day to the stile and cried, "Petit-Pontain, come here, I want to see you," and old mother would look up fondly, and with dotting eyes, watch her dainty colt go bounding toward his calling master, she would think, "What a good fellow. The cure, the holy pere Francois, predicted that in due time that little colt would be a great success, and a great fortune for his owner. He only pere knew thereof to speak, for he was a good fellow, and a good avocate, a Parisian life, and upon one memorable occasion had successfully placed 100 francs upon the winner of the grand prix de St. Louis, and he was a good fellow, the colt of the holy pere. He never came down the road that she did not utter a word of praise, and he was a good fellow, winning of recognition, as if she in his word said: "Pray stop a moment here." Petit-Pontain, and the old mother."

You are to know that old Felice's devotion to Petit-Poulin was human in its tenderness. As readily, as gladly and as surely as your dear mother would lay down her life for you, would old Felice have yielded up her life for her innocent, little darling. So old Felice was happy that pleasant time in that fair country, and Petit-Poulin waxed hale and ever-

That night the vineyard hills, bathed in the mellow grace of moonlight, saw a sight they had never seen before. From the east an army came riding and on their banners, of strange, determined men, appeared the emblem of a serpent. They were the Germans unheeded in that fair country and threatening things of which that peaceful valley had never dreamed. You and I were not there, but the Germans were there, the Germans advancing upon France—the champions of immortals eager to destroy the possessions and the human lives of fellow immortals! But old Felice, hearing of the coming of the foe, gathered a posse of cavalry and infantry availing with murderous intention—should not even suspect the truth. You cannot wonder, for what should a soulless beast care for the rights of his prey? The cry of human slaughter? Old Felice heard that strange din, and instinct led her to

These no came riding up to world strangers in those parts; they were usually accounted for by the fact that they had never heard before. Yes, as she had already guessed, they were German cavalymen. A battle was impending and the danger was so great that she would do anything to get out of there. She would do that. That was what they said. They approached her carefully, for they suspected that she might be a spy. She was not, but she was a woman of the world, and she had never heard even the flies that pestered her. "They are going to put me at the plow," she thought. "It is a long time since I have seen a plow. I have not seen one since Petit-Poulain was born. Poor Petit-Poulain will miss me, but I will soon return. With these thoughts she turned her head fondly and thought her pretty

Of peace I knew and can speak of peace with its solace of love, plenty, peace, our faith and our hope, our joy, our poverty, heartache, disap-

 I knew nothing and never shall know anything. I was born in the land of peace that law which God enjoined from Sinai and Christ confirmed in Galilee.
 I do not know of war nor can I tell you of it. I have seen the bones of my people, fought one glorious day in a fertile land, with vineyard hills all round me. But when night fell there was no moon, no stars, no light. The God was a wilderness; the winding way was choked with mangled corpses;
 the shell and shot had mowed down the wheat, the corn, the vines, the orchards, the gardens and the hedgerows,
 the black, charred, ruins, gaunt and ghost-like, macked the spots where homes had been. The corn and the vines had been mown and the spoiled hills seemed to crouch down like bereaved mothers under the pitiless gaze of the myriad

Adown she rood she galloped—the nine rood she had traversed, perhaps, a honsand times before, yet it was no hanced now she hardly knew it. The road was long and straight, level, the noble trees, the hedgerows and the elds of grain. Twenty-four hours of attle had done all this and more. In all those ghastly hours, one thought had been in her mind, the right thought, the thought of Petit-Poulain! She pictured him tied in that far-away stall, wondering why she did not come. He was hungry, she knew her dugs were full of milk and they poured out, how sweet would he be when he had drunk his fill! She broke his long fast, Petit-Poulain, Petit-Poulain, Petit-Poulain—this one thought and this alone had old Felice throughout.

Hard by the ruins of cottage, of garden and of cote, she came up standing; she was steaming and breathless. She called her eyes wildly around—the looked for the stable where she had left Petit-Poulain. She trembled as if an overwhelming apprehension of disaster suddenly possessed her. She gave a whinny, pathetic in its tenderness. She was calling Petit-Poulain. But there was no answer.

And old Felice—her udder bursting with the maternal grace he never again should know, and her heart breaking with the agony of sudden and awful bereavement—she staggered, as if blinded by despair, toward that vestige of her love, and bent over him and caressed her Petit Poulsen. — Eugene Field.

FRANK LEYBURN'S PROWESS KNOW
ALONG THE WHOLE CHINA COAST.

For years Frank Leyburn has been known as "the tiger slayer of Amoy." There is not a village along the coast of China, no matter how remote from the great centres of population, to which his fame has not extended. With him the killing of the great man-eaters who infest the jungles is looked upon as mere pastime, and he has shot the under almost all imaginable circumstances.

"Oh, yes," he said in a gruff tone, "have bagged a good many of the beasts in my day, but there is nothing remarkable about that. With us, don't you know, it's no great feat to kill a tiger." He then pointed to the tigers for the sport there is in why, bless my soul, I can see there is reason why any one should care to hear about tiger hunting. With us it is ordinary sport, just as deer stalking is in America. The tiger has been introduced here since his came more firmly and planted its feet very widely apart, "the tigers of China are not nearly so ferocious as those of India, but they give a good deal of trouble to the natives. When a tiger is first brought to the estate of a noble, he at once becomes ferocious and is never satisfied with any other diet. They come transformed into what are known as man-eaters, and they hunt hum-

"I do not remember of ever hearing of an execution with religious form that hymn has not been sung, as if criminal's conception of God's nature such that there is something in agony and trouble that is a pleasure to God. That isn't the fellowship of his suffering. It is the fellowship of infinite love, holiness in a world of sinners: the burdens that come on all holy hearts for others. Christ was elected to holiness, and the manifestations of the spirit are given to every man for the benefit of others. There is nothing so dear to God as a lavish life if that life be lavished for others.—Philadelphia Record.

when about 140 feet high Corporal Hamand, who was a few feet in front of me, placed his hand, whilst in the act of reaching another ledge, upon what turned out afterwards to be a gold watch in fairly good preservation, which it supposed must have been there several years, as no owner for it could be found.

The Illiterate Population.
Scandinavia sends to our shores the fewest illiterate persons—less than 1 per cent. of the entire emigration from Norway, Sweden and Denmark. Italy sends the greatest number, upward of 75 per cent. of the immigrants from that country not knowing how to read or write.

"I trust a literary genius in an unexpected quarter," remarked Newton Brown, the actor, to some professional gentlemen in the room. "I thought he was a comedian, one of those things which by a remarkable coincidence bore the same name as the actor did. We were playing 'Lost in London' with specialty acts to one night at the Strand. Some of the acts were on a day afternoon we landed in a small town. As night set in it began to pour down rain. It was a fearful night, but to my surprise there were about one hundred people out to see the play. But because of the gloom and damp without were ineffective, and in spite of all our efforts no enthusiasm could be extorted from the audience. I was disappointed to see on the local paper and was astonished to see under the headline, 'Lost in London', a full half column. I was curious to see what kind of a dramatic critic was to be found in the town."

The despised left hand makes good claim in many cases to be the defter in the two. The fingers that touch and just with such nicety the strings of the bow, the hand that guides and moves the bow. The hand that guides the reins and steers with exactness the horse through the crowded streets quite as cunning as—one might say more so—than the right hand that holds the whip. But great is fashion; unmanageable is theory. It would appear that Chambers Journal as that life became more and more complex we became more and more simple. The preference between our limbs is encouraged rather than hindered by every pair of scissors turned off at Sheffield, by every slap administered to the young offender by the police world dare to make a man incorrectly.

Building for Others.
 What if I build for others,
 And the walls of the building stand
 Long after I am forgotten
 By the dwellers within the land,
 Long after the buildings have crumbled

What if I build for others,
And the building shelters me not,
And within the home I have builded
I shall have no part or lot,
And the dwellers who have their homes there
Through all time shall know me not?

And I, though I have passed onward,
Hearing the Master's call,
May now, though it may not matter
To me what the building befall,
It is better to have builded for others
Than not to have built at all.

The trait of personal courage markedly characterized the house of Hanover. As King of England, George

I did no fighting, but before he reached that position he had distinguished himself by a valorous war at the battle of Marston and Swanton in 1794, and in high command in the war of the Spanish ascension from 1791 to 1795. His son, who was young, had displayed conspicuous valor in the battle of the Clouds, and he was the last British monarch who took part in actual war. He was a lumberland hater, no more, and although he was a great sportsman, and that virtue in him was undeniable. At Dettingen he was wounded in the fore front of the battle, at Fontenoy he was killed. He was the last of the fiercest battle, fighting at "a spiriting white heat." His grand nephew, the Duke of York, was an unfortunate soldier, who was killed at the battle of Waterloo. In the present reign a cousin and son of the Sovereign have done good service in the field, and that generation has been in it in the face of personal danger, has constantly maintained the calm courage of her race.

A STRIKINGLY EXTREME INSTANCE OF THE MEDICAL ARTICLE.

Within the present week in this city, says the Boston Advertiser, occurred an incident that is typical of the extreme which professional etiquette may carry. A patient lay ill of a raging fever, whose progress, apparently, had not been prevented or mitigated by the remedies prescribed by the doctor "in charge" of the case. That doctor was even distasteful to the latter, but he had been called in merely because he happened to be near at hand. The sick man

The facts in the case are indisputable and are given from personal knowledge. The consideration that under the circumstances the very life of the patient would be endangered made no impression on the two doctors, who looked only to "etiquette" of their profession. I, a medical practitioner, stated the rule correctly, one doctor in this commonwealth may have the conceded right to proscribe the attendance of another doctor on a patient, no matter what the wishes

ST. MARK'S CHURCH NOTES.

In the notices last Sunday attention was directed to Easter day and to the Rubric which reads: "and not that the very pastor shall communicate at the least three times in the year of which Easter be one."
A hearty and appreciative vote of thanks was accorded last Sunday afternoon to the esteemed instructor of the Men's Bible Class held under the auspices of the local chapter of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. These interesting and profitable weekly meetings to which all members of the congregation are invited (W.V.) be resumed on Sunday, 9th prox., at 3:30 p. m. in St. Mark's Hall.

Monday and Tuesday last witnessed largely attended funerals at this church. The former case was that of the late Frederick Sexsmith, Napane road, aged 21 years, who was released from a lengthened illness, patiently borne, on the 24th inst. The latter funeral, largely attended by the order of Royal Templars and others, was that of Nellie, younger daughter of George D. Smith, who though in feeble health for some time past was on Saturday last, after a few hours illness only, called to her rest. Much sympathy is felt for the respective bereaved families.

The Church's apostolic services of holy week commemorating the sufferings and death of our Redeemer are being held daily at 10 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. The offerings on Good Friday are annually given to the Bishop of Jerusalem's, Bishop Rhyh, mission work among the Jews in Jerusalem and the East.

The following services next Sunday will characterize the commemoration of joyful Easter day. Holy communion at 8:15 a. m. at also at mid-day, thus affording an opportunity to all to obey the risen Lord's command. Matins at 11 o'clock, when the canticles, etc., will be sung to the bridgewater setting, and appropriate anthem, evensong at 7 as usual with festival music and the special Psalms.

The annual children's festival is to be in the church at 3 p. m. The children to be very interesting one and all are invited to attend. The order of the service and words of the musical selections to be sung by the Sunday school choir will be distributed to adults attending this service.

All offerings next Sunday both special and ordinary are asked for the general church fund.

SARA LORD BAILEY.

This talented professional reader appeared again before a Deseronto audience, in the Methodist church, on Wednesday evening last, and, as might have been expected from her very satisfactory work here a year ago, she was heartily greeted by a large and intelligent audience. They expected another treat, in which they were anything but disappointed. After a selection by Prof. Denmark's Mandolin Club, Rev. Mr. Rice, who occupied the chair, in a few fitting words, introduced the great dramatic reader, who, on her way to the platform, received very hearty hand clapping. Owing to her having contracted a cold, and her printed programme being exceptionally heavy, "My Little Boy" was not given but "The Bottom Vender's Call" was substituted. Then followed in the course of a two hours programme "Mamma's Little Boy," "Judgment Day," "Life for Life," "Royal Bumper Degree," "Creed of the Bells" and "Engineers' Signals"—comprising repertoire of great variety and affording evidence of great dramatic power, in exercises varying and all effective both in grave and gay—a combination very rarely reached in any one individual. It is not too much to say, that Sara Lord Bailey maintained her right to be numbered among the very best of professional dramatic readers. There was also a choice musical feature in this entertainment. Prof. Denmark's Mandolin Club appeared for the first time in public, and the peculiarly sweet music rendered by this club, only as yet in its infancy, was thoroughly enjoyed and highly commended by many at the close. In the future this orchestra will be in great demand among the lovers of good music. A beautiful vocal solo "Absence," by Mrs. H. A. Yeomans, with Mandolin Club accompaniment, was a real gem. Miss Deana gave, with fine effect, "Wistful Lullaby," a very sweet vocal selection, while G. W. Hart, of Kingston, gave a well rendered violin solo, "Cavatine," Mrs. Yeomans furnishing accompaniment. The Harp of Kingston, gave in superior style, "Jennie MacNeill," and received from Mrs. Bailey hearty congratulations on her effective rendition, and pronouncing the effort as remarkably promising of future excellent development. The entertainment was indeed, a rare treat and in every way satisfactory.

Mr. Wilson, of London, strongly objects to the spending of money by government to the settlers from the United States to the Northwest.

INCOMING SETTLERS.

The Dominion government have passed an important order in council affecting homesteaders in the Northwest. The following are some of the most important points:

The sub-committee of council desire to direct attention to the fact that during the past year no less than 513 entries for homesteads in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories were made by persons coming from the United States of America. The subcommittees state this number would be greatly increased only for the recent order putting an end to the admission into Canada of settlers' cattle from that country upon a veterinary examination and report and enforcing the 90 days quarantine at all points along the international boundary from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The committee considered this class of settlers as particularly valuable as they bring a fine equipment and are accustomed to the climate, methods of farming, etc., and in order to mitigate to a very considerable extent the difficulties on the way of immigrants of the class referred to, recommend the immediate reservation of two additional quarantine stations in the neighborhood of Estevan and Wood Mountain, Manitoba, and also at Huntington, B.C., for settlers coming from Washington, Oregon, and Idaho. The committee also recommend settlers from Michigan to dispose of their most cattle in the United States. To those who cannot drive their cattle to Estevan a temporary quarantine station may be established at Greta. The committee propose that the care, feeding and watering of the animals shall be paid for by the Canadian government. It will also be necessary to make provision for the branding and registration of the animals on arrival, so that upon the expiry of the 90 days, there may be no difficulty in allowing them to their owners. It is recommended that the mounted police should undertake this duty so as to save cost. The C.P.R. had promised all assistance to the scheme which has been adopted by the Dominion government.

On the 19th inst. Miss Maria Stevenson died at the residence of Miss N. Baker, near Selby, at the advanced age of 81 years. Deceased slipped on the floor last New Year's day and injured her thigh, and was afterwards confined to her bed until the day of her death. Residing in the same house with Miss Baker is Mrs. Parks, who will be 80 years of age next September.

C. C. RICHARDSON & Co.
Gentlemen,—In driving over the mountains I took a severe cold which settled in my back and kidneys, causing me many sleepless nights of pain. The first application of MINARD'S LINIMENT so relieved me that I fell into a deep sleep and complete recovery shortly followed.

LOCAL ITEMS.

This is Good Friday.

Sanflowers are already in full bloom at many of the street corners.

Mr. Stoddard is trying the experiment of issuing his paper, the Prescott Journal, twice a week.

The wise schoolman will not wait until Arbor day to plant a birch where it will do most good.

The Rathbun Company have been awarded the contract of supplying Belleville with planing for sidewalk purposes.

Judge Laver, Judge Frazer, W. R. Aylen, R. Reid and G. E. Henderson will audit the accounts of the administration of justice for this county on April 14th.

The lumber in the Rathbun Company's yard at the foot of Queen street, Kingston, is being removed to the other yard in the city, preparatory to vacating the premises.

Mr. Balfour, leader of the opposition in the imperial commons, moved a vote of censure on the Irish executive for condoning serious offences and thus bringing the law into contempt. This motion caused a lively debate, but the government was eventually sustained by a majority of 47 votes.

Andrew Hill met with a serious accident at Napassee Mills, Cement Works. A large amount of coal caved in completely burying him. But for Miles Kenney, a lad eleven years old, who uncovered his face by scraping the coal away with his hands and thus giving him air, he would have lost his life. Mr. Hill still suffers severely from his injuries.

The single tax theory is rapidly gaining headway in all civilized countries and its general adoption is conceded to be merely a matter of time. It proposes to bring the revenue needed for government and all municipal purposes by means of a single tax on the value of land as distinguished from the value of improvement put upon the land by human industry. A resolution favoring this system has been carried in the parliament of New South Wales by a majority of three to one.

A resolution favoring the payment of members of parliament has been passed in the imperial house of commons. The government has also brought in a bill for the formation of parish councils. This is practically the adoption of the Ontario system of municipal councils. These measures together with the preliminary bills looking towards church disestablishment show that the people are beginning to feel their power and that the day for class privileges is drawing to a close.

Several farmers in different parts of the United States are reporting splendid success in growing a combination of two bushels of oats and one of peas for hay, cut just as the peas have passed the boiling stage and the oats are in the milk. In planting, the peas are sown first broadcast and then plowed under four inches deep, and the oats sowed and harrowed in on the top. These farmers who had faithfully tried it had been rewarded by a great saving in cash paid out for bran and cotton seed meal, and had their cows do fully as well.

The Montreal Herald was burned out on Monday evening, for the fourth time in ten years.

A bottle has been picked up at Ocean View, Va., containing a letter from a cattleman on the lost steamer Narcosis. It states that the steamer was struck by an iceberg during a snow storm on Feb. 19th and was soon in a sinking condition. It was too stormy to launch the boats. The steamer was then just about sinking.

Miss Nellie Smith, daughter of Mr. George R. Smith, died very suddenly last Saturday evening after a few hours illness. She had been complaining off and on during the winter but had recovered so far as to prevent any further anxiety. She had been out during the evening attending a small party at a friend's house. On coming home she complained of a pain in her head, and despite all that could be done died in a few hours. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon and was very numerous attending. The members of Deseronto Council, R. T. of T., with which she was connected, attending in a body. Mr. & Mrs. Smith have great sympathy in their great bereavement.

Valuable Notes.
Mrs. Alexander Loft, of this town, has three silver teaspoons which Isaac Hill, her great grandfather, had made in Montreal at the time the Mohawks left New York and came to Canada in 1783.

Crickets Club.
The annual meeting of the Deseronto Cricket Club will be held next Wednesday evening, April 6th, in the class room of the Mechanics Institute. A full attendance is expected. The club intend holding a grand concert in a few weeks time. Foreign talent of the very best class will be engaged.

Church of St. Vincent de Paul.
Last Sunday being Palm Sunday, the interesting ceremony of blessing the palms was performed by Rev. Father Hogan in the Church of St. Vincent de Paul. There will be services characteristic of the season on Easter Sunday with special musical selections by the choir. There will be the usual Easter offerings on the occasion.
